Despite protests, city buys Hodges property

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL City Council purchased the Hodges property for $1.75 million despite protests that they were paying substantially more for the 6.5 acres than many feel it is worth.

The official appraisal by Rae L. Kirk & Associates of Monterey, released at Monday night's special council meeting, lists the top value of the property at $1.5 million for special use and the lowest at $845,000. There are also many restrictions on its development.

The property lies behind the Carmel Mission, bordered on the east by Junipero Serra School ballfield, the south by Carmel Sanitary District and the west by Mission Ranch and the state park. The Carmel River runs through the property.

The city, acting as the Public Improvement Authority, will issue 20-year certificates of participation at an interest rate of no more than 8.9 percent to pay for purchase. It will add about $240,000 a year, in decreasing amounts, to the city debits. The action to buy the property was taken at the special city council meeting Monday night.

Councilmember Elinor Laiolo, who voted against the purchase, said that there were too many unanswered questions and the price was way out of line. None of the councilmembers disagreed that the price was "too high," but felt, in the long run, that getting the land was important.

"I think it was worth it to the city. I think the community is going to be glad we have it after awhile," Mayor Jean Grace said after the meeting. "I think the city paid a lot of money for it, but you can't quantify such a purchase."

Grace said that the city paid more than the assessed value "for the same reasons national and state parks end up paying more than the assessed value for a property — in order to protect open space."

"I think we paid too much, but I think it was worth the price. We did pay more than I thought we should, but I'm sure we are going to be glad we got it," Councilmember Jim Wright said. "It is a beautiful piece of property."

He added that with property at such a premium, "sure enough" some developer would get to build on it sooner of later.

In a letter to the city council and his subsequent address to the council Monday night, former planning commissioner Howard Nieman told the councilmembers his research showed that in comparison to the Mission Ranch purchase, the city was paying 222 percent more per acre for the Hodges property. The actual Mission Ranch transaction is sealed.

"However, information supplied by the Monterey County Assessor's Office indicates that approximately 21 acres of land

COUNCILMAN BOB Fischer and Mayor Jean Grace survey state parks wetlands adjacent to the Hodges property near the Carmel Mission. ("Mission Ranch Lands"), purchased in 1987 by Clint Eastwood is currently assessed at $2,543,000 or approximately $121,095 per acre," Nieman wrote.

( Nieman's figures, his letter states, excludes about $2,428,000 for the liquor license, buildings and improvements.)

Based on that, Nieman said he believes the "fair market value" of the Hodges property is approximately $787,000 rather than the $1.75 million the city is paying.

"Would you say that the tax assessement is the same as the fair market value in the real world?" Grace challenged.

"With a recent sale it is reappraised," Nieman answered.

"I know what the tax assessment of other properties are and know they are worth about two times as much," Grace retorted. "It is unfair to say, for the purposes of this discussion to use the tax assessment rolls. Are you aware that the owner of Mission Ranch offered $1.3 million to the Hodges for the property and they turned him down?"

"Yes, I am aware of that," he answered and pointed out that "your own appraisal states it is not worth what you are paying for it."

Nieman emphasized that he had no objection to purchasing the property, but he felt that the city should look at alternatives to buying the property to keep it open space.

"I'm just saying that this has been done in real haste. There has not been a full development of the facts. My other concern is that it has not been done in the public view," he added.

Phyllis Howard also protested the process and asked that the purchase go to a public vote, calling it "good public policy to do so."

"Until such time as the city fully discloses the information and thinking behind the proposed purchase of the Hodges property, the matter should be postponed. It is unfair to ask Carmel voters to accept the city council's decision to buy this property when analysis of the information which is available to the public suggests that we are paying through the nose for a property which has been for sale for over 20 years," Howard said.

Former planning commissioner Olof Dahlstrand also questioned the acquisition and said he had "real concern about the haste" in which the deal was going through. He also asked for a public vote and questioned whether the city should be acquiring property outside the city limits.

Laiolo backed the protests, listing the reasons for her dissenting vote, which include no written appraisal completed until after a purchase agreement was presented to the council by the city administrator (as negotiator), that the property lies within the 100-year flood zone and the economic burden this purchase would place on the city.

She also said that the property has many restrictions on development already and the city failed to contact the agencies that oversee river property.

"I firmly believe that those serving in government and responsible for the use of public funds are obliged to do so with full and complete information and knowledge and in a manner which will provide the most benefit to the most people in the community," Laiolo wrote in her memo. "This scenario contributes directly to inflation in real estate prices as did the purchase of the Picadilly Park property earlier in the decade. A city should not be in the real estate business," she concluded.

There was considerable debate over easements on the property and whether it adjoins the city, which was settled when the city attorney stated that there was access to the property over the Carmel Sanitary District strip of land that runs along the border.

THE ACQUISITION also had its champions. During the meeting, speakers alternated between opponents and advocates of the purchase.

On the in-favor side, Carmel Residents Association president Barbara Brooks told the council "we are investing in our future. Ten years from now, we will look back at this and be glad we have the property. I do know that if a private person purchases it, it will be removed from public access."

'This has been done in real haste. There has not been a full development of the facts. My other concern is that it has not been done in the public view.'

— Howard Nieman

Robert D'Isidoro of the Carmel Recreation Commisssion told the council that the commission did not know anything about "nuances of the economics," but was "excited by the prospect of acquiring land like (this piece.)"

To keep Carmel beautiful, D'Isidoro said, the city needs to keep as much open space as possible.

Carmel resident Paul Hazdovac told the council that in his experience in buying and selling property, appraisals are far below the price the market will bear. He cited a transaction he was involved in of a Seaside gasoline station where the appraisal was much less than he had been offered for the property.

Lessons taught

Dear Editor:

If James Hill of Carmel Valley, who had to stand in line 1½ hours at the Municipal Court House in order to pay for his daughter's traffic citation, had let his daughter stand there to pay for her own citation, perhaps the younger generation would grasp something of the trials and anxiety of inefficiency and come up with a better system.

Set it free

Dear Editor:

I was entertained when I came across your Dec. 21, 1989 issue of The Pine Cone showing a picture of myself in front of the Carmel Mission holding a painting of Mayor Eastwood and the pope.

The byline mentioned that Time magazine referred to me as the king of schlock and that I did my best to live up to that accolade. Actually they called me the czar of schlock, but what the heck. I always find it amusing when someone uses the term schlock since it is invariably used to refer to what the "other guy" sells. It's something like when U.S. News and World Report says that they report news while Time writes about junk. De Gustubus non est disputantum.

So from my viewpoint we sell only goods of the highest quality, but we do appreciate people realizing that we do try hard and we do do well at it.

Sometimes, though, I think I would prefer to be known as an intellectual author of works such as my Kultur Kreis Lehre of the German Cultural Historial School, published by CSUN in 1967. But I realize that there is just not enough demand for historical anthropological works. A man can't feed the wife and kids writing works of this sort. He must need to rise to the cultural reality and write mysteries and romances. Not my field.

Similarly I preferred to sell antiques way back in the ancient days of 1972 and '73 when I first came to our fair city, but the buying public rejected these offerings and made it clear that they preferred imprinted sportswear and gifts, sourvenirs and other historically significant locally oriented memorabilia. De gustubus again.

It is, of course, present in my mind that there are those who would like to dictate people's tastes and regulate what is to be available to the public in the shops. Happily those so inclined, in government, have lost favor in Eastern Europe as of late and I am hoping that those who hold similar views here will soon be able to understand the errors of those thoughts.

My particular success has been predicated on my ability to forsee the tastes and desires of the buying public, and having the ability to act independently on that vision. Clearly, the success could only have been accomplished because of the responses of literally hundreds of thousands of the finest customers who have ever trod the Carmel streets. Or for the matter, who have ever provided a village with such a wonderful largess as we all now enjoy.

The interesting thing is that if one has foresight, by definition, one sees things that others cannot. Those others find it very hard to relate to what the seer sees.

This is excellent when the non-seer is the competition, but can be somewhat disconcerting when the non-seeing bystanders are trying to figure out what you are doing, how, why and even if it is good.

I like to remind myself that even our traditions of old represent someone's vision and a break with the then past. We need to step forward boldly and face the reality of today or watch as our economy becomes second, and even third rate. Boldness and innovation is an American heritage that is being given up to Japan and the United Europe, and in great part due to government controls as well as the normal intransigence of the well-fed.

The struggle starts at home, but can only begin when the people recognize the ecological interactions with the business district form the positive view.

Examples of this are, I believe, that Carmel has more public park and usable land for its size than any other municipality that I can think of. It also has more machinery and more employees per capita than any other municipality in this state.

All of this is paid through funds received from a strong economy. The economy must be protected. Protection in this case is not ether in a bottle. Set it free. Let it live. Leben und leben lasen.

Communal identity

Dear Editor:

The controversy over Carmel's design review procedures and criteria for new architecture appropriate to its unique character has wider significance.

Carmel shares the fate of other of the world's beautiful places that are rapidly losing their irreplaceable qualitites. To see our cities and towns as having aesthetic, cultural and spiritual functions and not to view them as real estate market places only, is not sentimental, as some imply, but to be sensitive to the purposes for which people built communities in the first place.

What is so special to us about Carmel, is a community that still possesses a shared vision of these purposes, a "communal eye" as the playwright Peter Shaffer (of Amadeus fame), so aptly called this sense of identification with one's place.

Through this eye, residents retain a vision of the unique architectural characteristics that give places identity and meaning. Architecture embodies the city's memory. When a building is destroyed, then the memories that each individual has in connection with that building can no longer be passed on. If too much of a city's architectural heritage is destroyed, then the communal memories fade.

We commend to your readers the new book by Prince Charles, A Vision of Britian (Doubleday, 1989), that reminds us that "A healthy civilization exists with three relationships intact. It has a relationship with the present, a relationship with the future, and a relationship with the past. When the past feeds and sustains the present and the future, you have a civilized society. It was only in this century that we broke that pact with the past and tried to obliterate its meanings and its messages."

It is the still-powerful sense of Carmel's communal identity that led us to schedule the Seventh International Making Cities Livable Conference here in March 13-17. At these conferences, usually held in Charleston, S.C. and Venice, Italy, city officials, architects, planners and community leaders report on their efforts to honor their cities' genius loci, and its unique blueprint (DNA) for future growth and development.

Student generosity

Dear Editor:

There are many traditions at Carmel High School but one of the most praised and admired is the generous spirit of the student body during the holiday season.

The canned food drive at the school is incomparable in size to other collections in our area. Through the years the collection has risen from thousands to ten-thousands of cans. In the past eight to nine years more than 15,000 cans per year were collected. With a student body of 664 students, this figure is incredible.

Along with the canned food drive this year, the student government sponsored a family in the Project Santa program. They provided a needy family with a tree, dinner, and many wonderful gifts and a Christmas they wouldn't have had otherwise. The school also supported the Toys for Tots program in addition to all these worthy causes.

The warmth and caring of Carmel High students is evident and is strengthening every year.

Out of touch

Dear Editor:

As local conservationists look back on the successes and failures of 1989, the opposition of the area's newspapers stands out as the main block against the popular trend toward increasing protection of our natural environment.

The recent election for the water management district board demonstrated that even endorsements by the three leading, establishment-oriented papers couldn't get a strongly pro-development candidate (DeBerry) elected. That election should have warned those newspapers how detached their editorials are from this community's political mainstream.

Conversely, it should have tipped off local residents to the fact that the area's newspapers aren't serving their public's interests. Specifically, they're neglecting to expose all the issues and facts relating to the peninsula's water and development problems.

So far from crusading to preserve our natural environment, our big three newspapers have consistently avoided controversy in their treatment of environmental issues, preferring to placate their well-organized real estate advertisers and the two major political parties, even to the point of stonewalling the publication of issues essential to the debate over whether a new dam should be built on the Carmel River.

For instance, all the area's newspapers have refused to publish arguments which contend that a larger dam would leave the river dry for more years at a stretch than it is now. There's even a valid question as to the economic feasibility of a larger dam on the Carmel River when current levels of rainfall are so slow to fill the existing Los Padres Dam.

Similarly, the recent vote of Measure B provides yet another example of our newspapers' lack of commitment to the interests of their community.

None of the papers criticized our county supervisors for allowing the funding of perennially important institutions such as the county library system and the county hospital to be lumped into the same proposition as a much more expensive and more controversial highway construction project in Prunedale.

The supervisors seemingly schemed to make the rural communities and Salinas vote to preserve their essential county services, overwhelming the wealthier Monterey Peninsula (which foots most of the bill), where consistent majorities opposed Measure B.

If the area's newspapers aren't willing to crusade against such fraud, deceit, and financial waste in our government, then they could at least open their pages to freelance writers who are independent of these establishment ties, rather than relegating their views to relatively short letters to the editor. The way things are going, the letters to the editor are all too often the only commentary worth reading in our newspapers.

Confusing decision on Rocky Creek proposal

By DAVID LELAND

COUNTY SUPERVISORS on Tuesday rendered a decision on Rocky Creek Ranch that managed to confuse just about everyone involved — including themselves.

Rocky Creek Ranch, owned by Marin County retailer Marshall Rothman, involves a 602-acre parcel on the ridge above Palo Colorado Canyon Road. Rothman has proposed building 10 homes, averaging 60 acres per lot.

'It's not winning or losing. It's just a waste of time. The staff is out to get me.'

— Marshall Rothman

The problem that Rothman has run into with the county is that several of the legal lots of record are too close to the creek or on more than a 30-percent slope, which is against the county land use plan.

For that reason, Rothman has attempted to secure a major lot line adjustment, which means moving the boundaries on the lots to provide for, what he believes, is a logical formation.

Rothman has balked at the Monterey County Planning Commission's request to post 15-foot flags on the proposed building "envelopes," and instead has staked them at 10 feet.

First District Supervisor Marc Del Piero discredited Rothman's viewshed findings.

"It wasn't surveyed," he said, referring to a consultant's report. "It was done with a set of binoculars."

The county claims that on two of the lots it is impossible to tell if the viewshed policies in the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan are being violated.

Under the Big Sur LUP, no building may be visible from Highway 1.

The board heard Rothman's appeal this week, which asked that his application be deemed complete so the project could move forward to the Minor Subdivision Committee.

After a two-hour hearing, supervisors approved (4-0, with Karas abstaining), a portion of the application and ordered Rothman to continue working with the planning staff on the remainder of the application.

Second District Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck, who proposed the motion, told Rothman that he could at least begin to process four of his lots while he worked with planning staff on the rest. Wrong.

"The application is not being broken up," said J.R. Ramos, deputy counsel, who advised the board on the matter. "The application cannot go forward unless it is entirely complete."

After the hearing, Ramos likened a lot line adjustment to a "Chinese puzzle."

"You cannot move one line unless you move the rest," he said.

•

BOTH ROTHMAN and opponents of the project, who claim that Rocky Creek Ranch should be undergoing the scrutiny of a major subdivision, walked away from the hearing shaking their heads.

"I don't understand what the decision was for," said Todd Acheson, Palo Colorado Canyon resident. "All of the building envelopes are predicated on the lot line adjustments. You can't have one without the other."

Acheson said that without Rocky Creek Ranch undergoing the process included in a subdivision, the environmental impacts of each building envelope will be viewed separately, instead of cumulatively.

"Lot line adjustments are backdoor ways to create subdivisions," he said.

Be that as it may, Rothman, contacted after the hearing, surely was not claiming a victory.

"It's not winning or losing," he said. "It's just a waste of time."

Rothman claims to have received permission to build on one of his lots in the viewshed. He has threatened to take that parcel out of the project and ask for Proposition 70 money.

A part of Proposition 70 dedicates state money for the purchase of land contained in the viewshed in Big Sur that cannot be build upon.

Rothman said the parcel is worth at least $1 million, or two density credits.

And while Ramos said there has been "progress toward a solution" between the county planning staff and Rothman, the developer disagrees.

"The staff is out to get me," he said. "They're out to stop me at all costs."

Rothman filed his application almost two years ago and is anxious to move on — he is not interested in spending the next few years battling with planners.

"I might as well file a lawsuit today," he said. "It will take the same amount of time and I'll get everything."

Rothman further charged that the county is ignorant regarding local planning laws.

'This application is a rat's nest of complexity. It's a direct test of the critical viewshed policies and if it goes through, as applied for, it will render viewshed protection on the Big Sur Coast meaningless.'

— Lloyd Jones

"They've taken a relatively simple issue and confused the ---- out of it," he said.

Big Sur resident Lloyd Jones believes that the consequences of this week's decision could be far-reaching.

"This application is a rat's nest of complexity," he said. "It's a direct test of the critical viewshed policies and if it goes through, as applied for, it will render viewshed protection on the Big Sur Coast meaningless."

County feels it has realized promises of Big Sur coastal plan

By DAVID LELAND

BY ACQUIRING its first three parcels of land in Big Sur using funding from Proposition 70, Monterey County has indeed been able to accomplish what some coastal communities can only dream about.

'We have been able to make the promises of the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan come true. This is a unique achievment.'

— Karin Strasser Kauffman

In other words the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan's mandate is being realized.

"We have been able to make the promises of the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan come true," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, during a celebration at Hudson House at Point Lobos this week. "This is a unique achievement."

'Proposition 70 really allows us and Monterey County to do what we have been trying to do for the past 15 years. And that is to preserve the Highway 1 viewshed.'

— Brian Steen

— Big Sur Land Trust

Most coastal communities within the state either downzone or condemn land in order to reduce building, she said, or, such as in Malibu, jurisdictions don't consider the viewshed and promote private property rights.

With the help of Proposition 70 funding, however, the county has been able to avoid such a conflict.

"Here on the Big Sur coast we have been able to avoid the pitfalls of giving up one goal for another," said Strasser Kauffman, who campaigned heavily for Proposition 70.

State voters approved the measure in June 1988, releasing $776 million under the California Wildlife Coastal and Park Conservation Act.

Part of the proposition's proceeds, $25 million, was designated to acquiring critical viewshed parcels in Big Sur.

Under the Big Sur LUP, it is illegal to build anywhere that is visible from Highway 1, so about 100 property owners were left with land that, while extremely valuable on paper, was worthless as far as development.

This week the first three parcels were acquired by the county. These are:

- A 6.14-acre parcel owned by Harry Hunt on the east side of Highway 1 about five miles south of the Carmel River Bridge. Price tag: $350,000.

The Hunt land was originally used to hold cattle overnight when they were being driven from Big Sur to Monterey.

- The Zirker property. A 1.59-acre parcel of land on the east side of Highway 1, north of Rocky Point. Price tag: $325,000.

"We're very pleased with the conclusion of this somewhat-slow process," said Richard Zirker of the 16-month journey. "We're satisfied with the end result."

- The Perrine property. Five acres of land in the Sycamore Canyon/Dani Ridge area near Pfeiffer Big Sur State Beach. Price tag: $215,000.

"This is the day of blessing that we have been waiting for," said Margaret Owings, longtime Big Sur environmentalist and Proposition 70 supporter.

•

JUST BECAUSE a person owns land on the Big Sur Coast doesn't automatically qualify them for Proposition 70 funding, however.

First the land has to be contained in the viewshed. Secondly it must be determined by the Monterey County Deparmtent of Planning and Building Inspection that the land meets criteria necessary to build.

In other words, the land must contain ingredients such as proper slope, drainage capability, be geological sound and several other planning factors.

The Big Sur Land Trust has volunteered its services in helping people wade through the process.

"It's ironic that we are playing the role of developer," said Brian Steen, Big Sur Land Trust executive director, referring to the task of convincing the county that certain parcels are buildable.

The land trust helped two of the three owners of the recently acquired parcels in their journey through the maze of bureaucracy.

"Proposition 70 really allows us and Monterey County to do what we have been trying to do for the past 15 years," Steen said. "And that is to preserve the Highway 1 viewshed."

Steen added that the land trust will likely manage parcels that are not directly used for recreational uses.

"It's up to the county," he said. "We'll do what the county wants us to do."

EARLIER THIS week the first three parcels in Big Sur, using funds from Proposition 70 funding, were acquired by Monterey County. They will be held in open space in perpetuity.

Guessing game begins for 1990 city council election

By NANCY HILLS

CARMEL POLITICOS are gearing up for the upcoming April 10 city election and rumors are flying about who will vie for the mayoral and two city council seats.

'Two years is too short a time to have the continuity the city deserves in this position.'

— Jean Grace

Filing begins Thursday, Jan. 11 and on the ballot will be the two-year-term mayor's seat, now occupied by Jean Grace and two four-year city council seats, one held by Elinor Laiolo and the other by Bob Fischer. The filing date closes Feb. 1, unless an incumbent decides against runnning, then the deadline is extended until Feb. 6.

The only candidate that has declared she will join the race is Grace, who announced as long as a year ago she will seek re-election.

"Two years is too short a time to have the continuity the city deserves in this position," Grace explained.

Grace added she believes city issues need "civilized discussion" and someone whose position is to listen to everyone, not just the people who are vocal about their views at meetings.

"I think I have done that," she said.

Other rumored candidates for the mayor's seat are Elinor Laiolo and City Councilman Ken White, but neither will commit either way about their intentions.

In the past two years, Laiolo has often been in the minority on the council.

Laiolo in the past has advocated a laissez faire approach to government, favoring fewer restrictions on businesses and in the residential area. She has consistently voted against the purchase of land for the city.

Laiolo had considered running for mayor in 1987, but decided against it at the last moment. This time around, however, if she chooses to run for mayor, she will have to give up her council seat.

White also has not decided what course he will take. White could run for mayor and still retain his council seat if he loses.

"I am not running as of right now. If things change, I might," White said.

In the council race, the names mentioned include incumbent Fischer, Carmel Residents Association president Barbara Brooks, Carmel Planning Commission Chairperson Carla Ramsey and Carmel Planning Commissioner Jack Kennedy.

Fischer said he has not made up his mind about re-election.

"I am very seriously thinking about it. I just have feeling that a good deal of the major projects are completed and all there remains to do is some real fine tuning. I don't see any more acquisitions after the Hodges property. The city is going to have to decide what direction it is going in and what to do with what it has. I think a major portion of my job is done, but it would still be fun to be a part of the fine tuning," Fischer explained.

Fischer, a retired Carmel police officer, said with his four years on the council, he has 35 years of service to the community.

"That's a lot of time. Time is the main factor why I would not run again," he added.

Ramsey said she was not concentrating on the election at this time, having her hands full with her job as the commission chairperson.

Kennedy deferred the question, stating "I have not made a decision as yet. I understand I have more time to do that."

'I am very seriously thinking about it (re-election). I think a major portion of my job is done, but it would still be fun to be a part of the fine tuning.'

— Bob Fischer

Brooks explained she would rather not comment yet, but has not filled out any papers for the campaign. Her name is one of the most often mentioned as a possible candidate.

As politics go, in the upcoming week and by the time the next Pine Cone comes out, all that can change.

Youth center has tasty plans for new snack bar

By DAVID LELAND

AN ANDY Hardy-like drama is unfolding at the Carmel Youth Center, a scene that is becoming almost commonplace at the rejuvenated facility.

Just a couple of years ago, a dingy basement storage area at the youth center was miraculously transformed into a state-of-the-art weight room, with the help of then-mayor Clint Eastwood.

'It's wild. It blows my mind how generous people are.'
— Susan Cooley

Eastwood, who has befriended the youth center much in the fashion as Bing Crosby did in the 1950s and 1960s, chipped in $20,000 of his own money and called upon some friends in the bodybuilding business — namely Arnold Schwarzenegger and Joe Gold, who donated $35,000 worth of equipment.

Kids happily helped with cleanup work and parents provided a guiding force for the project.

The weight room now serves as home for 300 fitness-crazed teenagers, not to mention as a workout spot for the Carmel High School football team.

And what does a growing body need after a hard workout? You guessed it: food.

Begin Act II of the heart-warming drama. This time the players include Eastwood, whose work with an annual fund-raiser has enabled the project, the Carmel Youth Center Board of Directors, parents and a local merchant.

Funding is generated from three Spaghetti Western auctions the center has sponsored at Eastwood's Mission Ranch, which have garnered almost $220,000, Cooley said.

Once the center is completed, Cooley looks forward to helping children with the money from the auctions.

"Now all we have to do is to raise money for the programs," she said, referring to field trips and scholarships. "These are things we've always wanted to do."

The scenario is a simple one — the transformation of the dining area into a 1950s-style burger pit.

"It's wild," said Susan Cooley, a member of the board, who has spearheaded the project with Ave Lallos, board president. "It blows my mind how generous people are."

Indeed, Don Flanagan, owner of Concepts thru food, a Carmel Valley food service consulting firm, has managed to call in a number of favors simply by telling merchandisers that Eastwood is involved in the project.

A sampling of items includes Hamilton Beach malt mixers, a Glenc-Star refrigeration system, furniture from J.H. Carr, a Bakers Pride pizza oven, blowers from Penn Ventilator Co., all custom stainless steel from Andrus Sheet Metal and a microwave oven from Amana.

Local contractors are performing the work either pro bono or at cost. Flanagan added that he still needs additional tradesmen to help with the work.

The result of Flanagan's labors is a $125,000 job being done for around $50,000.

"It'll look like any 1950s diner you've ever seen when we're finished with it," said Flanagan, adding that the job should be completed by the end of January.

Flanagan, who does not have children, is modest regarding his involvement with the project.

"Because it is for the community, I did a little arm-twisting," he said.

•

THE ACTUAL idea for a '50s diner is not a new one. Such a concept was supported by 80 percent of Carmel High School students during a survey taken three years ago.

Cooley said the board re-surveyed 40 Carmel Middle School students recently to make sure the idea was still being supported.

"They flipped out" in approval, she said.

Middle school students will be given the task of naming the new lounge, and the winner will be allowed to give a party for 10 of his or her friends at the youth center.

"They can eat until they get sick," Cooley said.

A formal black tie and champagne party will be given for adults who have donated to the cause shortly after the opening.

A sampling of the menu includes hamburgers, pizza, fries and nachos.

As it turns out, the youth center board had budgeted $50,000 for the restoration of the restaurant, but work will also include the renovation of the entire recreation area.

Council buys Hodges property despite some protests

In answer to a request for a public vote, Wright said he believed that the vote on Picadilly Park had increased the price because the property owners knew the residents really wanted to buy it. Grace said that a public vote would take months longer than the Hodges Trust wanted to spend on negotiations.

City Administrator Doug Schmitz read a chronology of the city's interest in the property, beginning in 1969. The city had been interested in using the land as a city corporation yard and entered into various agreements with the Hodges Trust, including one that gave the city first right of refusal if an offer is made on the property. That was another point Laiolo made against buying the land when it does not need to, though City Attorney Don Freeman said it is unknown whether or not that agreement is still in force.

Before the vote, councilmembers maintained their position in favor of the purchase, though they were paying "top dollar" for an investment in the future.

"It's pretty clear to me that almost every council going back to the '60s has shown an interest in this property," Councilmember White said.

The fact that every council has thought about the land and the benefits of the property in the future outweighed the protests, he said.

"I feel deep down that they had ample opportunity to express themselves. I'm just sorry they did it at the last minute," he added.

"We've had some very eloquent speakers tonight. This is a beautiful piece of property — you can't realize it until you get down to the river bottom," Councilmember Bob Fischer said.

"Property is worth the value in the eye of the beholder. I agree this is too much money, but I don't want my great-grandchildren wondering why we didn't buy it when we could," he said. "Developers have a way settling in, then getting their buildings up. And what happens to the Little League field when Father Serra gets promoted? You are going to see the biggest parking lot you ever saw in that field. Maybe we can take care of our own youngsters."

All property the city has purchased has run into controversy, Grace said, but "I don't think we're sorry for buying other pieces of property. Whatever we do, we're not going to please everybody."

Carmel's traffic crunch giving rise to frayed tempers

By DAVID LELAND

MOST OF the time Carmel's five parking officers allow overtime parking violators to let off a little steam after being ticketed, but sometimes an officer must draw the line.

For Parking Officer Cindy Williams, that point occured Dec. 13, when Pebble Beach resident and local businessman John Robert Whittaker's temper exploded after being cited at Lincoln Street and Seventh Avenue.

'The bottom line is that there is a point, or threshold, where most reasonable people stop. In this case he stepped over it.'

— Cindy Williams
— Parking officer

"The bottom line is that there is a point, or threshold, where most reasonable people stop," said Williams, who has been with the Carmel Police Department for six years. "In this case he stepped over it."

After receiving a ticket for overtime parking in a two-hour zone, Whittaker became outraged and ripped up the ticket and screamed obscenities at Williams.

Fearing that Whittaker would return after he drove off, Williams called for a police backup. Whittaker then came back to the scene and attempted to reach into Williams' three-wheeled vehicle to take back the torn ticket.

In an effort to avoid what she thought was a physical attack, Williams drove off, accidentally bumping Whittaker, who fell to the ground and skinned his knee.

"Obviously I'm embarrased about it, but I feel bad for her too — she was just doing her job," Whittaker said. "I thought I was more mature than getting into it over a parking ticket."

Whittaker, who was arrested later that day and charged with vandalism, disturbing the peace and assault and battery, pleaded guilty last week in Monterey County Municipal Court to disturbing the peace. (The other two charges were dropped.) He was fined $250 and ordered to write a letter of apology to Williams.

"He's basically a nice guy and incredibly remorseful and apologetic," said Gary Meyers, the prosecuting deputy district attorney. "But you can't have this type of thing happening out there to people doing their job."

Indeed.

The Carmel Police Department has made it perfectly clear that this is not open season on parking officers.

"Just as we don't stand by when an innocent person is attacked on the street, we are not going to stand by and let that happen to one of our officers," said Chief John McGilvray.

Supervised by Sgt. Ken O'Donovan, the parking officer team of Williams, Bob Riddle, Deborah Gilliam, Lisa Panetta and Laurie Muniz, operates daily between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

While the main duty of the civilian force is to cite parking violators, members also help the department with traffic control, aiding in emergency situations and acting as matrons when females are arrested.

"Other parking officers in other cities don't do as many side jobs as we do," said Williams, a third-generation Carmelite.

TO BE sure, the job of a parking enforcement official is never going to be the most popular one in town, but somebody certainly has to do it.

Originally, citations were written by rank and file officers, but that changed permanently in 1972 when the first parking officers were hired.

The first ticket was written in downtown Carmel on June 13, 1947. A total of 30 tickets were issued that week.

The program has accelerated as the number of cars has increased and traffic levels have worsened, leading to problems in the business community.

"My wife doesn't shop in Carmel anymore, if she shops a little too long, she's got a parking ticket," Whittaker said. "It's a tough situation."

Police records indicate that in November of 1989, 3,495 citations were issued — 2,893 of those for overtime parking.

Last year the city garnered $395,580 through parking citations, or 5 percent of its annual budget, according to Sandy Davenport, Carmel's financial services coordinator.

That number could grow during the coming year if the city follows through with its crackdown on habitual offenders, or those motorists with five or more citations.

A total of $73,116 is owed the city by these 148 culprits, McGilvray said, adding that the state Department of Motor Vehicles has been notified and will hold up the driver's registration when renewal time comes. One offender has a total of 112 citations, worth $3,688.

This year could see the advent of "the boot," (a device that locks a car's wheels in place), increased towaways and the possible publishing of the offenders' names in The Pine Cone, McGilvray said.

Driving four different routes within the city, parking officers are, as a rule, undaunted by a few harsh words from violators.

"When people yell at you, they're really yelling at the uniform," Williams said.

'He's basically a nice guy and incredibly remorseful and apologetic. But you can't have this type of thing happening out there to people doing their job.'

— Gary Meyers
— Deputy DA

Just for the record, all the banter in the world is not going to get that ticket voided once it has been placed on the windshield.

State law dictates that after a ticket has been placed on a car, it can only be resolved by the courts.

If, however, the officer finds a person sprinting to their car with a logical explanation for being overtime, the ticket can be voided.

"There are times when we do void citation," McGilvray said. "There's no hard and fast rule."

And while abuse surely makes for news, parking officer Riddle, a retired U.S. Army command sergeant major, said that he can go for weeks at a time without encountering any flaring tempers.

"You meet so many different people, so many of them are tourists — I enjoy that," Riddle said. "Some people are fascinated; they don't know what you are doing."

In Europe, where many of Carmel's tourists originate, drivers operate on the honor system when it comes to parking.

"Most people are reasonable except for a small percentile," Riddle said. "Some people cannot accept the fact that they are wrong."

'Partial' council approves plan for subordinate units

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL City Council had a lottery Tuesday night so there would be enough councilmembers to vote on policies, for a subordinate units ordinance and, in another action, had its first approval of an R-4 zoning ordinance.

The council also debated the city's comments on a draft environmental impact report on the Odello project.

The meeting went past the council's 9 p.m. deadline; items left unfinished were continued until Tuesday, Jan. 23.

Three members of the council had to step down due to potential conflicts of interest on policy direction for a subordinate unit ordinance.

Mayor Jean Grace and councilmembers Jim Wright and Elinor Laiolo all either have subordinate units on their property or an arrangement that qualifies as subordinate units under the proposed ordinance.

With only Ken White and Bob Fischer left to vote, the council was without a quorum, so names of the three others were thrown into the "hat" and city clerk Jeanne Brehmer pulled one out for that councilmember to take his or her council seat.

City Attorney Don Freeman instructed the council that whoever's name was pulled could not join in any discussion or make or second any motions. Brehmer pulled Laiolo's name.

Facing each other across the council chambers, White and Fischer began their brief debate over the issues, going down a checklist provided by city staff.

With Laiolo casting the swing vote, the council determined:

- To permit subordinate units as directed in the general plan.
- Not require one of the two units be owner-occupied, with Ken White dissenting.
- To qualify as a "presently existing unit" it must be physically existing at this time but not necessarily continuously rented over the years. Presently existing units may have different standards than "new" units — units built after April 1987 when the revised general plan took effect.
- No personal hardship is required for new units or age limitation, such as the occupant must be 60 years old or older.

The policies will go back to the planning commission to be included in a ordinance currently under development. The ordinance is aimed at legalizing numerous subordinate units — often called second kitchens or granny units — within the residential district.

In other action, the council conducted a first reading of the R-4 district zoning ordinance that should end a decade-long controversy over zoning requirements in the area. The ordinance keeps density at 33 units per acre. No one spoke during the public comment time.

The council also:

- Approved a 2.9 percent cost of living increase in trash pickup rates, with White voting no.
- Debated the city comments for the draft environmental impact report on the Odello project called Coast Ranch. The project, which has been in the works for probably two decades, includes 76 units for the artichoke fields south of The Crossroads.

Councilmembers Elinor Laiolo and Bob Fischer objected to what they felt were negative comments on the project.

County planners reviewing P.B. Co.'s housing proposal

THE MONTEREY County Planning Department has until late January to decide if the Pebble Beach Co.'s application for a 359-unit housing plan is complete.

The company submitted its application, which includes construction in 13 areas of the Del Monte Forest, Dec. 20.

Known as the Planned Residential Program, plans call for single-family homes, townhouses, Senior Life Care Housing and low- and moderate-income homes.

In conjunction with the Planned Residential Program, about 92 acres of open space within new residential areas will be created. The majority of the open space will be managed by the Del Monte Forest Foundation.

If the company's application is found to be complete, the project will move toward a public hearing at the Monterey County Planning Commission.

If the planning staff asks for more information, the process will be delayed at least 30 days.

Residential design workshop scheduled for next week

THE CARMEL City Council has set a workshop for 4 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 17 in city council chambers to complete its discussions of residential design code changes.

After the council completes its review, it will schedule a joint meeting with the planning commission to discuss the issues.

Water board policies puts them in a position to control growth

By NANCY HILLS

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District board Monday outlined its policies for limiting new water meter connections or expansions, putting themselves in the driver's seat in deciding the type of growth that will occur on the peninsula until the ordinance is revoked.

Opinions on the board ran the full gamut, from Director Jim Hughes opposition to the ordinance to Director Bob Russell's advocacy of limiting any new connections unless the new use can be offset with a retrofit program.

Hughes opposed the ordinance, he said, because he felt that the water supply now is more or the same as last year at the same time and the board should wait until March at least before it takes this action.

Russell and Hekhuis backed a new-connections-only policy if the offsite retrofit program is in place because, they said, the situation is very serious.

In a packed auditorium, boardmembers listened to more than two hours of public comment, primarily from members of the building trades who opposed the limitation.

The board is scheduled to consider the ordinance on Jan. 22 and the restrictions will go into effect then. It will be lifted, the board decided, when the Carmel River runs into the ocean.

The board imposed a blanket water meter permit moratorium in December. The new law will replace that urgency ordinance.

Still permited are any remodels that will not increase water use.

Once the board was done with their review, Director Dale Hekhuis commented that it could be they had given so many exceptions that no significant amount of water will be saved.

The board decided to:

- Allow permits for vacant lots of record for single-family homes. This issue was deadlocked in a tie, 5th District Supervisor and water director Karin Strasser Kauffman, Pacific Grove Mayor and director Morris Fisher and Hughes voting in favor and Russell, Hekhuis and Chairman Dick Heuer voting for requiring offsite retrofit program first. Heuer changed his vote to allow it to go through. The district is scheduled to discuss an offsite retrofit program later this month.
- Allow remodels in single-family homes that increase water use if the homeowner can prove he or she has done everything reasonable to retrofit if the water use is no more than a single-family home.
- Commercial connections are allowed on vacant lots of record if the water use is no more than estimated for a single-family home. Other commercial and industrial connections will not get permits.
- Affordable housing projects will get permits.
- Non-profit organizations can ask for a permit through a variance procedure.
- Permit affordable senior citizen housing.
- Multi-family housing construction will not get a permit.
- No new subdivisions will get permits.

Cultural commission to grapple with issue of Forest Theater use

THE CARMEL Cultural Commission has the Forest Theater on its playbill next week when it tackles the issues of dividing up the theater's seasons and changing the rent as well as dealing with other policy questions on the facility.

Currently, Children's Experimental Theater, Forest Theater Guild and GroveMont Theater divide up the seasons, with CET using the downstairs theater and the other two using the upstairs exterior stage.

Controversy erupted once again between the guild and the other two groups when, at the city's request, the guild wrote a letter outlining what "in the best of all possible worlds" it would like to see happen at the Forest theater.

In the letter, the Guild said it would, if possible, like to expand its season to include an additional weekend in the spring and one in the fall. The guild has the summer season, and any expansion of its season in the spring or fall eliminates those weekends for the other two groups. GroveMont currently has four weeks for its production while the guild has two and a half months.

Additionally, the guild has requested that it be able to use the downstairs for dressing rooms during the summer when CET is conducting its summer program. The guild has a large show at the end of the summer and needs the space. Marsha Hovick of CET said that would eliminate the Summer Intensive Program in which students are taught theatrical skills.

Hamish Tyler, president of the guild, said that it only means that she would have to clean up at the end of the day so the property can be used.

The commissioners are investigating alternatives for Hovick, including moving her summer program to one of the area's school facilities.

The commission will also consider increasing Hovick's rent to be be equal to the other two groups.

Water potential to be tested in Seaside

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District is testing the water supply potential of a new California-American Water co. (Cal-Am) well drilled in the Seaside Coastal ground water subbasin.

The district has hired Staal, Gardner and Dunne (SGD), consulting geologists, to assess whether the Playa No. 4 well represents additional extractable supply from the Seaside Coastal subbasin. In cooperation with Cal-Am, SGD will monitor Cal-AM's pump tests in early January and analyze the results.

According to MPWMD geohydrologist Joe Oliver, SGD will determine whether the new well, which is deeper than most others, could affect existing wells in the Seaside area. SGD will also assess where the water comes from.

"The consultants will determine how the new well relates to the hydrogeology of the aquifer system, including the effects of the Ord Terrace Fault," said Oliver.

"The Ord Terrace Fault may influence the recharge pattern — that is, where the water comes from to supply the water pumped from the new well. We want to be sure that pumping this new well does not create problems elsewhere in the Seaside basin."

Oliver noted that fault zones can act as physical barriers to confine ground water into discrete aquifers.

The pumping capacity of the new Playa No. 4 well is presently estimated at 1,200 gallons per minute, which could produce about 1,450 acre feet per year, assuming normal operations. This amount represents about eight percent (8 percent) of annual Cal-Am production in a normal year.

The $6,700 SGD study is the first part of an overall assessment of the water supply potential of the Seaside Coastal subbasin. The MPWMD board approved the subbasin study on Dec. 4, 1989 as part of the Interim Water Supply Program. The purpose of the Interim Program is to provide water supply until a new dam can be built.

You don't have to be an American to die of a heart attack.

You also don't have to overeat. Or consume excessive amounts of cholesterol. Or ignore high blood pressure. Or smoke. But that's what a large segment of this country's population does. And that's one reason the United States has the highest incidence of heart attack in the world. At the American Heart Association, we're trying to help Americans change the way they live. And die.

News notes:

Mace training now available

THE STATE license to possess tear gas (Mace) for self-defense is issued to individuals who complete a two-hour California Department of Justice training course.

The course is now available through Sgt. William Kennedy of the Pacific Grove Police Department (375-5154). Fee is $23, payable at the course.

Individuals who phone will be given information on the next course in their area. However, the course also is available to groups of 20 or more persons, at locations provided by the groups. Such groups could include employees, neighborhood watch groups, women's organizations, students, etc. In California the following individuals cannot posses tear gas or enroll in a course:

Persons who have been convicted of a felony, persons who have been convicted of any crime involving assault, persons who are addicted to the use of narcotics, persons who have been convicted of the misuse of tear gas, and persons under the age of 16. But, 16- and 17-year-olds must phone the number above and secure a state consent form to be signed by a parent or adult guardian.

According to the Department of Justice, tear gas is uncomfortably painful and is temporarily blinding, but it is non-lethal. The department explains that tear gas consists of small solid particles of matter in a "carrier" which is projected by a propellant. The particles — or crystals — do their work by vaporizing on the skin.

Tear gas is widely used by law enforcement agencies during the civil disorders of the 1960s and during that time it proved to be an effective weapon which causes no serious injury. In the early 1980s the California Legislature, alarmed over the rising number of assualts on citizens, authorized its possession by persons who complete the two-hour training course and secure the state license.

At the end of a course state-approved tear gas devices can be purchased. Course instructors are police officers who are specialists in crime prevention and self-defense.

Seniors program needs participants

CARMEL POLICE Department's "Seniors Helping Seniors" program has need for two types of seniors: those who would like to help and those who desire help.

According to Cathy Dampier, desk officer, there are seniors who are looking for some type of community involvement to donate their time and others who are lonely, "shut-ins," or are "at-risk" due to medical or physical reasons and desire contact with someone who cares about their welfare.

Under the program, senior volunteers call participants of the program by telephone from the Carmel Police Department. If for some reason the recipient doesn't answer the phone, the volunteer alerts the police dispatcher and a patrol unit is sent to check on the participant's welfare. To be effective, calls are made at about the same time every day, Dampier said, but the seniors aren't restricted to their homes. If they plan to be gone, they merely notify the police department in advance.

In addition to the daily phone calls, home visitations, tea parties, and luncheons are also scheduled to "further enhance and improve the quality of our contacts" with those who are shut-ins or at-risk, Dampier said.

Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer or a recipient of the "Seniors Helping Seniors" program is encouraged to call the Carmel Police Department at 624-6403.

Meals on Wheels has 'wish list'

MEALS ON Wheels, which serves more than 250 peninsula shut-ins with hot meals daily, is in dire need of items to go along with its new building.

Money is continually being raised for the building, but some items are still needed "to make the building much more comfortable and easier to run," according to veteran Meals on Wheels driver Chuck Poland.

Some of the needs on the wish list include: commercial potato and carrot peelers, pots and pans, toasters, knife sharpener, kitchen utensils, commercial floor polisher, conference tables, extension ladder, step ladder, and stainless steel work tables.

Outside needs include patio furniture, garden tools, hoses, outside walkway lights, and a large brick, rock or stone barbecue grill.

The building, at 700 Jewell Ave. in Pacific Grove, was completed in early June.

Those wishing to contribute, please contact MOW at 375-4454.

No radical changes in traffic laws, but watch DUI

MOST CALIFORNIA drivers won't have to adjust to any radical changes in the traffic laws in 1990, according to Highway Patrol Commissioner Maury Hannigan.

But if you drink and drive, he noted, "be prepared to lose your license, your vehicle and quite possibly a substantial chunk of your freedom as a consequence of your transgression."

NEW DUI LAWS

"One of the most important new traffic laws for 1990 is the lowering of the blood alcohol concentration (BAC) level to .08 percent," Hannigan said. "This law incorporates into the Vehicle Code a very significant medical research finding — that everyone's ability to drive a vehicle is measurably reduced by levels of alcohol well below the current .10 percent BAC.

"In enacting this law," he added, "the Legislature has formally acknowledged the public's growing intolerance of people who drink and drive. Over the past decade, half of all the fatal accidents in this state have been caused by drinking drivers, at a cost of well over 20,000 lives.

"The public is fed up with this," said Hannigan, "and the CHP intends to spearhead a public awareness campaign in January to ensure that motorists understand the exact nature and importance of this change."

The .08 law — Senate Bill 408 by Sen. Bill Leonard (R-Redlands) — is effective Jan. 1.

Drivers arrested for driving under the influence can expect to have their licenses suspended for four months as a result of the enactment of S.B. 1623 by Sen. Bill Lockyer (D-Hayward), the commissioner said.

"The statute authorizes peace officers to confiscate the license of anyone who refuses a DUI chemical test or who has a BAC at or above .10 percent," said the commissioner. The driver will receive a temporary permit good for 45 days, to allow time to request a hearing by a Department of Motor Vehicles hearing officer if the violator desires.

At the end of the 45 days, if the suspension order is upheld, the violator loses his or her license for four months and must pay a reissue fee of up to $100 to have the driving privilege reinstated.

This provision, known as the "administrative per se" program, does not go into effect until July 1.

Senate Bill 310 by Sen. John Seymour (R-Anaheim), allows the courts to sell the vehicle of any person charged with a third or subsequent misdemeanor DUI violation or with a felony DUI violation — including vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated — within seven years of a prior DUI conviction. Proceeds of the sale would go to cities or counties for substance abuse programs.

Under A.B. 1808 (Assemblyman Jack O'Connell, D-Carpinteria), persons convicted of DUI with a boy or girl under 14 in the vehicle can expect increased jail time of anywhere from 48 hours to 90 days in the county repository, depending on the number of prior DUI convictions.

The provisions of S.B. 310 and A.B. 1808 are effective Jan. 1.

A law designed to curb drinking and driving by the drivers of commercial vehicles was enacted during this past legislative session but does not take effect until Jan. 1, 1992, Hannigan said. Senate Bill 1119 (Seymour) reduces the BAC limits for commercial drivers from .10 to .04 percent. It also requires commercial drivers found to have a BAC of .01 percent or higher to be placed out of service for 24 hours, and it allows the DMV to suspend the commercial driving privilege not only of any commercial driver convicted of DUI but also of anyone who refuses to take or complete a DUI chemical test.

MISCELLANEOUS

The new traffic law that will affect the greatest number of motorists in 1990 is not a new law at all, the commissioner explained, but a one-year extension of an existing law. "Senate Bill 1361 by Sen. Alan Robbins (D-Van Nuys), extends the proof of financial responsibility requirement another year," he said. "A motorist must still provide evidence that he or she has financial responsibility when requested to do so by a peace officer.

"For most people such evidence need only consist of a piece of paper with the name of the motorist's insurance company and the policy number," he added.

Two other new laws provide penalty enhancements for persons convicted of vehicle theft and speeding by commercial drivers.

Assembly Bill 332 by Assemblyman Patrick Nolan (R-Glendale), increases the maximum sentences a court may impose for felony vehicle theft and for the third and fourth convictions for vehicle theft, receiving stolen property and joyriding. It also provides for a fine of up to $10,000; makes it possible to seize the financial assets of anyone convicted of engaging in a pattern of vehicle theft; and adds vehicle theft to the list of crimes that constitute criminal gang activity.

Senate Bill 463 (Seymour) increases the fines for speeding violations involving a bus, motor truck, truck-tractor with three or more axles, or truck or truck-tractor pulling another vehicle to up to $200 for a first conviction and $300 for subsequent convictions. (The vehicle must have been traveling 10 mph or more above the speed limit.)

Finally, Senate Concurrent Resolution 35 (Seymour), gives legislative approval to the Highway Patrol's specially marked patrol vehicle program.

"This program originated as a pilot program in 1987 in six areas characterized by unusually high numbers of truck-involved accidents," Hannigan said. "It employed enforcement vehicles that were painted and equipped so as to reduce their identifiability as traditional enforcement vehicles. They were driven by officers specially trained in enforcing the traffic laws pertaining to commercial vehicles.

"As a result of this program," he added, "accident rates involving commercial vehicles in the six targeted areas were significantly reduced in 1987.

"I am pleased to announce that as a result of S.C.R. 35 the Highway Patrol intends to reinstate this program on a statewide basis sometime in the coming year."

Robert Ely is Officer of Year

THE CARMEL Police Department has selected Robert Thomas Ely as the 1989 Officer of the Year.

Ely joined the department in April 1988 after serving six years with the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department.

"Officer Ely's energetic and pro-active approach to preventative patrol made a significant contribution in reaching the Department's goal of an overall reduction in serious crime," wrote John J. McGilvray, Carmel chief of police. "His professionalism combined with tenacity and diligence has resulted ina number of on-sight arrests and the successful conclusion of several major cases. Officer Ely's warm manner and humor have made many friends for the department."

Ely and his wife and children make their home in Monterey. His hobbies include archery, hiking, camping and swimming.

The Carmel Pine Cone

Carmel City Council

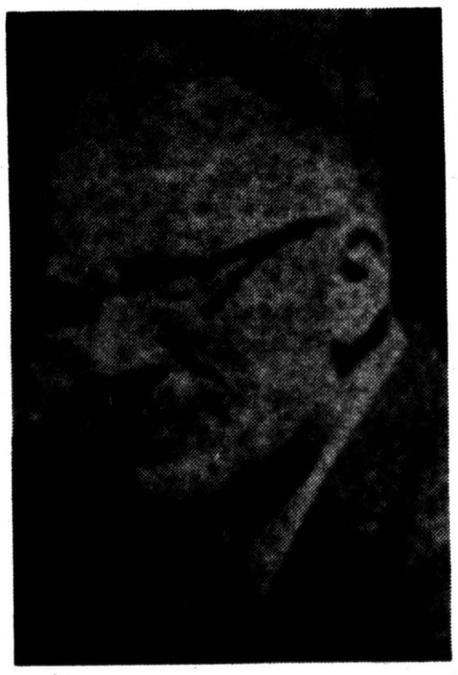
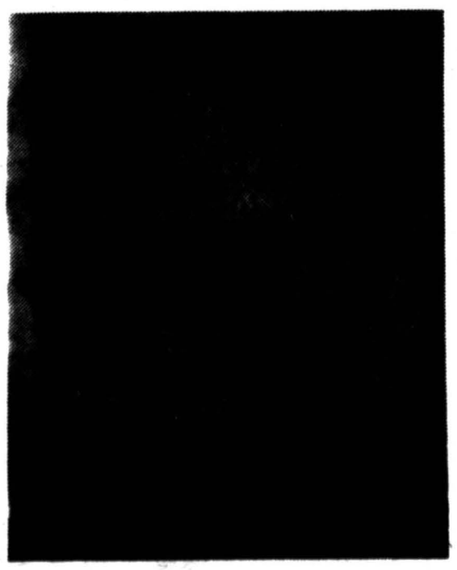
MAYOR STEPHEN A. GRANT

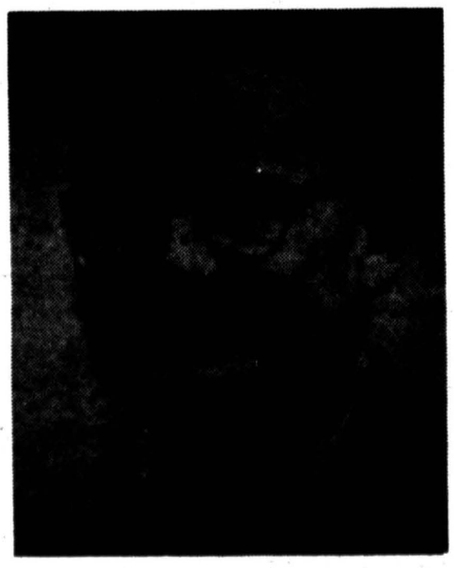
Councilman Whittlesey



Councilman Norberg



Councilman Soffen



Councilman Blanke

With Mayor Stephen A. Grant at the helm, the government of the City of Carmel is the responsibility of the men pictured at left. Two of them, Councilmen Herbert Blanke and William Soffen, will occupy seats for the next four years. The terms of Councilmen Elton Whittlesey, Gunnar Norberg and Mayor Grant expire in 1968.

Mayor Grant is a life insurance underwriter. Mr. Whittlesey is an attorney. Mr. Blanke is a partner in a pest exterminating business. Mr. Norberg is a travel agent. Mr. Soffen, who is a newcomer to the council, is a motel owner. Both Mr. Whittlesey and Mr. Blanke have served as Mayor of Carmel for two years, both are serving second terms on the council. Mr. Norberg also is serving his second term.

Can The Pine Cone Survive?

BY ALLMAN COOK

During this first six weeks as the new Pine Cone publisher, the problems have started to reveal themselves to me. There are creaks and groans experienced as we endeavor to give the weekly newspaper this community wants.

The Pine Cone has reeled under several ownership changes. Financially, it has become a loser. Competition has sensed an opportunity and now tries to close in. From its low rent area, a Carmel Valley non-union printer has made repeated efforts to invade, mostly through occasional mass "give-aways" at the post office.

The big Monterey city daily makes repeated drives on Carmel businessmen for advertising. The latest is its effort to represent the Carmel community with a big 50th anniversary issue. We shall offer a 50th anniversary issue too at the proper time. After all the Pine Cone has been representing this community for nearly 52 years.

So Mr. Businessman, will you please save some of that ad budget money for your Pine Cone?

Incidentally, neither of the two aforementioned printing houses even have a business license from Carmel.

The Carmel Pine Cone does not object. We say three cheers for the American way of doing business.

Business thrives on competition. Recently in an effort to economize I accepted Councilman Gunnar Norberg's offer to report on council meetings without a pay check. The resentment resulting from this was such that we are now looking for another council reporter. Councilman Norberg did an excellent job of reporting.

Oh yes, there are other problems. You should see a few of the local typographical union's requests for our employees within their jurisdiction, when our present contract runs out.

I do feel a bit battered but once again I say three cheers for the American way of doing business.

Now, I want to see the Carmel Pine Cone continue to serve and enlarge its services to this community. We now have an excellent team of printers who want to serve. The office, editorial, reporting, distribution and advertising staff are eager and working hard to serve. We are grateful for the solid core of friends up here and want to serve them better and better.

Do you want the Carmel Pine Cone to survive? You can tell us by letting us in on your news items and article potentials. We will try to turn them up, too. You can tell us by letting us know when we overlook a service to you. You can tell us by letting us supply some of your printing needs — letterheads, envelopes, announcements, programs, etc. You can tell us by letting the Pine Cone handle your community advertising. You can tell us by buying this paper.

We do want to serve you. Do you want us?

I hope I can write another article soon saying that your answer has been "yes."

Bair Promises School District Balanced Budget

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

Three key actions — none passed unanimously — were believed to have set a reasonably sound fiscal course for the Carmel Unified School District to sail in the coming 1966-67 school year — in view of its reduced resources because of the recent failure of the override tax measure at the polls.

At the midpoint in last night's long session, Superintendent Merrill Blair ventured the prognostication that — with stands then being taken by the school board — he would be able to present, at a future session, a balanced budget. Since the board at last month's session had been able to effect a net reduction in proposed 1966-67 expenditures of only some $31,300, Blair's forecast, therefore, implied that he could see savings in various budget categories of some $96,514, since the deficit predicted on the basis of the original tentative budget made last February totaled $127,814.

CUT PENNIES, NICKELS, DIMES

While the precise dollar effect of the board's actions was not detailed during the long, and sometimes rambling discussion of both relevant and occasionally irrelevant matters, Blair offered the view that "by cutting pennies, nickels, and dimes here and

Carmel and Pine Cone survive tumultuous '60s

By SUSAN BECK

"CAN THE Pine Cone Survive?" queried an article written by Allman Cook, who became the publisher of the newspaper in the spring of 1966. He said that the problems of the newspaper were beginning to reveal themselves, and under the past several ownership changes it had become a financial loser.

Competition was coming in from all sides. In the low-rent area of Carmel Valley a non-union printer had made repeated attempts to invade the advertising market through "give-aways" at the post office, and the Herald was pushing for ads from Carmel businessmen, using the idea of reperesnting Carmel with a 50th anniversary issue.

Cook retaliated: "We shall offer a 50th anniversary issue, too, at the proper time. After all the Pine Cone has been representing this community for nearly 52 years. So Mr. Businessman, will you please save some of the ad budget money for your Pine Cone."

He went on to say that the newspaper wanted to continue serving the community. All of the staff were eager to serve and appreciated the friends they had.

"Do you want the Carmel Pine Cone to survive...You can tell us by letting the Pine Cone handle your community advertising. You can tell us by buying this paper...I hope I can write another article soon saying that your answer has been 'yes,' " said Cook.

The '60s were a time of transition. Out with the old, in with the new. Make it or break it. Survive or die.

In October of 1960 editor Wilma Cook's editorial was headed "Not Good Enough for Carmel." The topic was zoning. She advised residents who were planning to attend the next council meeting with selfish interest in keeping Carmel quiet, beautiful and individual to request more time to study the proposed new zoning ordinance. She said that the zoning ordinance of 1929 which had been revised in 1940 represented advanced thinking in zoning for the times, but the new ordinance did not provide enough protection for a small core who are centered around several blocks of Ocean Avenue. It seriously weakened protections enjoyed for 20 years for the rest of the business district. The ordinance didn't make it.

Mobile homes didn't make it either. The Pine Cone helped by going on record in June 1960 as opposed to the request for a trailer park north of the Carmel River.

Charles Giles of Pacific Grove made an application for rezoning 12 acres east of Highway 1. Cook suggested that the time to appear and offer vocal protests would be at the next public hearing and letters of protest should be directed to the county planning commission. She said to focus on the appropriate county body and not dissipate the energy and enthusiasm that would be necessary at a later date.

•

AN ORDINANCE that has survived to this day (although it isn't enforced), requires women who walk in Carmel wearing spiked heels to obtain a permit to release the city from any damage claims arising from "wearing heels higher than two inches and with a bearing surface of less than one square inch." The spike heel law went into effect in 1964.

The annual Carmel Bach Festival survived despite the changing times. Pilgrims from everywhere were arriving in Carmel to participate in the 23rd festival named after the great German composer Johann Sebastian Bach. However, this time the festival would be held without the leadership of Dene Denny, co-founder with Hazel Watrous of the festival in 1935.

Denny first built houses in Carmel. She was a fine pianist and she played for locals in her modern studio with its simplicity and freedom from clutter. The studio became the cultural center and it was there that the first local symphony began its rehearsals.

The entire program was a memorial to Denny. She dedicated years to the establishment of the small village of Carmel as a musical center known far and wide. The Bach Festival that she organized consisted of a 48-piece orchestra, 31-voice chorale and a score of invited vocal and instrumental soloists.

The 23rd annual festival review by Mary Lindsay-Oliver said that Denny would have been happy with the enthusiasm of welcome and performance applause: "Never before in Carmel has a chorus rendered so fine and stimulating a performance, one that ended much too soon."

75TH DIAMOND JUBILEE

"AREN'T YOU glad we're spending our vacation in Carmel with its queer little houses and odd people?" was the caption for this cartoon that appeared in the April 20, 1967 issue of the Carmel Pine Cone. Obviously things have changed very little in 23 years.

ANOTHER MEMORIAL of sorts during the early part of the decade was organized by Sen. Ed Tickle. He put together the first "Firewatch," which was a reunion of residents who had "been there" and shared the tears, terror, triumphs, and laughs during the 1906 San Francisco "fire."

About 60 people, mostly from the peninsula with a large percentage from Carmel, met for lunch at La Playa Hotel to exchange their experiences of the great earthquake.

Just as the reunion adjourned, a French door to the hotel dining room was slammed by accident. It crashed and rattled. No one said a thing, but the group eyed one another apprehensively. A faint shudder passed among them.

We all experienced the shock and sadness when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in 1963. The Pine Cone had recommended Nixon for president in 1960 when Clifford Cook was publisher. Cook said that Sen. Kennedy's comments during the campaign had "shocked our tender nerves. His remarks on current foreign affairs give us the impression that he would be likely to go off half-cocked in a crisis. As for domestic matters...who of us can afford another round of inflation?"

During the campaign Charles Xuereb of Carmel wrote a letter to the editor. He recalled several of Kennedy's remarks such as his proposal for "a conference between Israel and the Arab State to consider privately their common problems." Xuereb asked about Kennedy's right to interfere in the afairs of other nations and suggested that he be reminded that America is no longer immune from the horrors of war and his name might have already been printed on the nose cone of a ballistic missile.

Among those in the nation watching the election returns was Mrs. Johanna Salinger Carlson, mother of Sen. Kennedy's press secretary, Pierre Salinger. Carlson lived in Carmel on Torres and Fifth Street with her husband Jerry.

Carmel and Pine Cone survive tumultuous '60s

She reported to the Pine Cone that as she watched her son making a statement to waiting crowds of newsmen on behalf of Kennedy she noticed that, "He looked very tired, and he wasn't wearing an overcoat even though it was chilly and windy." He phoned late that evening and told his mother that there was even then "no question that Kennedy was the president-elect." Kennedy was elected, but all too soon taken away from us. The Pine Cone's new publisher and editor, Donald Marshall, responded to the assassination of Kennedy by stating that, "There are not words that this paper could possible print which could ever in any way assuage the grief of the world on the great loss it has suffered...no matter how remote he had formerly seemed, and regardless of how much one had disagreed with his philosophy, his loss was a personal tragedy to every person on this earth."

The Pine Cone even ran a poem written by the paper's arts and literature editor, Harry W. Fletcher.

"To J.F.K."
Dear John, Dear John,
I cannot think you gone
While we of lesser magnitude
Are left to carry on.
No braver heart, no stronger hand
Held high the beacon of our land,
Stood staunch for justice, struck the key
To herald world-wide liberty.
This day, your name on foreign tongue
Reverberates your work begun;
And if your loss is freedom's gain,
Your martyrdom was not in vain.

•

ROBERT KENNEDY, like his brother before him, was cut down by an assassin's bullets in June of '68. Allman Cook wrote, "I regret the violence that caused this situation and see in it the same violence causing the assassination of 500 of our American young men every week in Vietnam plus the many hundreds of Asians suffering the same fate."

Steven A. Gann of Carmel began a series of articles from Vietnam that ran in the paper almost weekly. In one article that ran a series of photos of soldiers capturing an enemy bunker, he said, "All of these men are teenagers and it will be a few years before any of them reach 21."

Gann wrote numerous articles from Vietnam during 1968. Then in 1969 the Pine Cone changed its focus dramatically. Other than the few updates on "Our Men In Service," the only reference to Vietnam was an article that was published on Dec. 18 about Bill Moyers' accenting the "bad" news and burying good news citing his coverage of the pope's support of Nixon's Vietnam policies. An editor's note ran along side the article agreeing with Moyers' comment that "...there is a compelling quality about bad news..." However, the editor said, "The Pine Cone being a weekly newspaper, deliberately seeks out "good" news to print, since other media and other newspapers carry a full sufficient amount of bad news."

Teenagers who didn't go to Vietnam were discovering their own future enemy and creating a lot of "bad" news.

"It's with us," was the lead of one of the few articles about the existence of drugs in Carmel. In the 1967 article the reason given for the drug traffic vulnerability of the Carmel school district was attributed to the students' affluence. A former Carmel High School student was quoted as saying that in the senior yearbook he could pick out 125 students who had had some experience with marijuana, some with LSD, and there was use of "nutmeg and other fantastic stuff just to get high on."

•

FOR THOSE who just wanted to get "high on life" they could drive down the coast and listen to folk music at the Big Sur Hot Springs. The shows featured people like Joan Baez and her two sisters Mimi Farina and Pauline Marden, Judy Collins, Mark Spoelstra and his new folk-rock band, and Al Kooper of The Blues Project.

Carmel in the '60s definitely had its "highs" and "lows." An editor's column in the early part of the decade reprinted an article from The Los Angeles Times that described the city by the sea as viewed by a visitor.

The article by Horace Sutton said, "The oglers and the gogglers have breached the arty fastnesses here by the Pacific. They rumble into town these days like rampaging Visigoths leaving nothing but parking problems, paper cups on the beach and $13 million a year in the shops. Not counting what they drop in hotels, motels and other bide-a-wees. Once the woodsy redoubt of painters and writers, Carmel has become a sea-washed sunswept freak. People come from miles around to see the funny place where the longhairs live. And they still live, the quaint things, without house numbers, mail deliveries, television aerials, undertaking parlors, bowling alleys, jails, cemeteries or live music in public places. If you want to die of dance you better go someplace else."

The editorial responded that this was one perspective, however, the locals saw the city as a community populated by conservative persons of good taste.

"Not for us the glare of neon signs or trees sacrificed for miles of paved sidewalks which permit mailmen to plod from door to door. We have live music in our homes, attend the Monterey County Symphony concerts and the Bach Festival, hear internationally known artists brought here by the Carmel Music Society. We have serious painters and writers, and active are our organizations. Our little theatres present fine fare. All in all, quaint things that we are, even perhaps 'Longhairs,' we have an enjoyable life in spite of visitors. We are proud Carmel is a "seawashed freak" and mean to keep it that way; in our way. Those who poke fun at us are often motivated by envy."

'We have an enjoyable life in spite of visitors. We are proud Carmel is a 'seawashed freak' and mean to keep it that way; in our way. Those who poke fun at us are often motivated by envy.'

Fortunately, the "seawashed freak" and the Pine Cone survived in their own way despite the turbulance and transitions of the '60s.

PADRE CORNER

By Emily Rubin

Noriega, Who's he?

GEN. MANUEL Noriega has surrendered himself to American authorities, and a new hope has arisen in the country of Panama.

The United States' involvement in Panama along with Noriega's surrender is an important situation in relation to world politics, economics, and drug-trafficking. Therefore, every citizen in the United States should be affected by it in some way. The range of reactions of the students at Carmel High School varies from well-informed and incisive to complete lack of understanding.

I asked many Carmel High students for their reactions to the Panamanian crisis and to the surrender of Noriega and received a variety of responses. Several of these responses were "Who is Noriega?" Is this response coming from the same people who have trouble placing America on the map? I feel this issue, along with many other current events, is important to teenagers, especially in that we will be the leaders of our country in the next generation. Our ignorance now will not help us in the future.

However, the majority of the students that I talked with had a general understanding and some important concerns about the situation in Panama. For instance, one student was particularly upset with the Vatican's decision to grant asylum to Noriega. "Considering Noriega acts in such an ungodly manner," this student said, "I was surprised to see the Catholic church's decision to harbor him from the apprehension he so well deserves."

Regarding Noriega's voluntary surrender to American authorities, another student showed some disappointment. "The American judicial system will charge Noriega with only drug-trafficking crimes and not for the crimes against humanity that he committed." This student continued, "It may be a prolonged and expensive trial which may lead to punishment that may seem inadequate to many individuals."

Considering the recent rapid execution of the former Rumanian leader, Ceausescu, I feel Noriega is taking advantage of our judicial freedoms.

The overall feeling that I had while talking to the students was that many of them considered Noriega to be insane and somewhat obsessed with power and greed. Ironically, it was President Bush's obsession with capturing Noriega throughout his years of being CIA director, vice-president (under Reagan) in charge of drug affairs, and eventually president, which led to our involvement in Panama.

With Fort Ord being part of our community, the loss of American lives brought up the question of whether the Panamanian involvement was worth it. The surrender of Noriega may seriously cut international drug-trafficking temporarily, but will it have the lasting effect that we have hope for? Only time will tell.

PEOPLE OF ALL NATIONS!

Most everyone seems to want a peaceful world, and many are trying to make it a reality without giving much thought to the means being employed to achieve such a glorious end.

Now, for one to develop an absolute concept of a truly peaceful society, the following three definitions (all being the intellectual property of physicist and cosmological innovator Andrew J. Galambos) would be essential:

PROPERTY: An individual volitional being's life and all (non-procreative) derivatives of his life;

CAPITALISM: That societal structure whose mechanism is capable of protecting all forms of private property completely; and FREEDOM: The societal condition that exists when every individual has FULL (i.e. 100%) control over his own property.

With the foregoing in mind, a satisfying definition of Peace can therefore be proposed as follows:

PEACE: The order that exists when man attains Freedom.

So, having shown that Freedom is actually the goal we should all be striving for (with Peace to emerge as an immediate by-product therefrom), and observing that a proper application of Capitalism is the means to bring it about (and not through a refinement of the political apparatus, whose very existence threatens the creation and protection of property), you may be interested to learn that...

WATER WATCH

By Henrietta Stern

Status update

TODAY'S COLUMN provides a "status update" on the Water Supply Project Environmental Impact Report and Statement (EIR/EIS).

As you may recall, the water management district's proposed project is a 24,000 acre foot New Los Padres Reservoir, located just below the existing dam. State and federal laws require that the environmental effects of several alternatives to the proposed dam be thoroughly analyzed. Thus, the EIR/EIS will compare the benefits and impacts of the following projects:

- 24,000 acre foot New Los Padres Dam (proposed project).
- 9,000 acre foot New Los Padres Dam.
- 23,000 acre foot New San Clemente Dam.
- 11,000 acre foot San Clemente Creek Dam with pumped storage.
- 10,500 acre foot Chupines Creek Dam with pumped storage.
- 6,000 acre foot Cachagua Creek Dam combined with dredging both existing reservoirs to original capacity.
- 28,000 acre foot Canada Dam with pumped storage (based on preliminary design developed by Cal-Am).
- 7 MGD desalination plant (non-dam alternative).
- No Project.

SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

Our intention is to distribute an administrative draft (rough draft), of the report for regulatory agency comment in early spring. Once the Army Corps of Engineers signs off on the corrected version of the rought draft, the district may release the official Supplemental Draft EIR/EIS for public review and comment, hopefully in May or June.

The release date of the Supplemental Draft will be influenced by the agency comments on our rough draft. The fewer comments, the faster things will progress. Thus, it is in our interest to have the document as complete as possible before submitting it for agency review.

GOOD PROGRESS MADE

Numerous studies have been completed or are nearing completion, and the first drafts of several chapters are finished. The following paragraphs briefly review progress to date on the EIR/EIS, according to subject matter. Note that the topics below are all required subject matter in an EIR/EIS:

NEED FOR THE PROJECT — First draft text has been completed.

ALTERNATIVES — Lengthy first draft text has been written that describes the numerous alternatives considered, and the selection process used to determine which would be analyzed in detail in the EIR/EIS. It includes three appendices that support the information presented.

PROJECT DESCRIPTIONS — Project descriptions for each of the alternatives, except Canada Dam, are nearing completion. Cal-Am is presently assessing the engineering feasibility and costs of the infiltration gallery concept as well as the dam/reservoir itself. The district is assisting Cal-Am in developing operations scenarios with the district's CVSIM computer model. Cal-Am plans to have a more definitive project description by March 1990.

Fishery release schedules have been developed for the New Los Padres Project, based on a comprehensive fishery study between the two existing dams. Bechtel Civil, our engineering consultant, is completing designs for fish passage facilities based on sediment data and discussions with agency staff.

GEOLOGY AND SOILS — First draft text for this chapter has been completed. It may be updated based on new informtion about the Canada site that is due in February.

FISH AND OTHER AQUATIC LIFE — Assessments were made of reservoir inundation and blockage impacts to steelhead spawning and rearing habitat. Analysis of riverflow impacts, temperature effects and other concerns will continue in Winter 1990.

VEGETATION AND WILDLIFE — Numerous studies have been completed, including vegetation mapping, riparian corridor mapping, endangered species (including a special Smith's Blue Butterfly survey), native plants and wildlife. Agency and district staff cooperatively performed a habitat assessment of riparian vegetation at each reservoir site (except Canada), as well as at potential mitigation sites. A riparian mitigation plan is nearing completion.

ARCHEOLOGY — Assessments of potential impacts have been completed for all reservoir sites.

SOCIOECONOMICS: CUMULATIVE IMPACTS — Draft text has been completed for both of these chapters. Cost information will be revised once mitigation requirements are better defined.

WORK UNDERWAY

The major task at hand is to complete the final operations scenarios for each alternative, and code this information into the CVSIM computer model. The computer spits out numerous tables on yield, flow, pumping, ground water storage, rationing, fishery flow releases and other information for the water years 1902 through 1989. District staff and consultants then use this information to assess water supply performance under various conditions. It is also used to determine potential impacts to fish, riparian vegetation, erosion, the river channel, flooding, the Carmel River lagoon and beaches.

A NEW "WORST CASE" SCENARIO?

Complicating factors include the present drought, which appears to be the worst in our 88 years on record. All previous decisions were based on the 1976-77 drought event as the "worst-case" scenario. There have been longer droughts than our present situation (for example, six years in the late 1940s), and there have been more severe individual years (such as 1977). But the current drought is long enough (going on four years now), and severe enough (about 15 percent of normal streamflow), to pack a real punch!

This new information may affect the size and operations of both the New Los Padres Dam and the Canada Dam. Presently, both the district and Cal-Am are using the 1976-77 event as the design drought. District staff is carefully reviewing preliminary computer output to determine if changes will be necessary. Hopefully, Mother Nature will bail us out this winter, and we won't have a new "worst-case." What a way to start the New Year!

TAKE MY WORD FOR IT

By D. Patrick Gallagher

Round John Virgin

DURING THE last presidential campaign a strong emphasis was placed by George Bush on the pledge of allegiance, and I began to think back about how important the pledge had been to me in grade school.

We began every day with the sisters leading us in prayer and the pledge of allegiance. Unfortunately, I never really understood what I was saying when I recited the pledge, it was just something we did by rote, and the resulting misunderstanding went uncorrected for years.

For the longest time I believed the opening line said, "I lead the pigeons to the flag..." This was followed by something about the "new knighted states of America" and "to the public for widget stands" and, of course, the ever-popular "one nation, invisible." At that age it did not occur to me these were illogical sentences nor would I have been troubled by any such revelation. It would not have detracted from the meaning of the pledge, which I believe I understood.

Thinking back now it is interesting to note that only in parochial schools do church and state appear to coexist without controversy. I'm afraid most of the prayers we recited in those tender years were learned by rote, too. Nevertheless, most were learned with greater accuracy, the reason most probably being that one was required to memorize the Latin, and there was less chance of confusing the words since our knowledge of that language was severely limited. The English versions continued to provide trouble, however, as with the 23rd Psalm, the ending of which every former parochial school graduate or dropout remembers as "Shirley, good Mrs. Murphy, shall follow me all the days of my life..."

Recitations of adult themes are often confusing and meaningless to children. This extends even to popular songs such as Silent Night, about which the following anecdote is told.

A parochial school class was assigned the task of depicting in crayon each child's vision of the birth of Christ. In each picture there was the requisite shepherds, wise men, animals and the Holy Family. As the Sister passed among the students, she stopped at the desk of one little boy whose picture was slightly different. There in the middle of the familiar assembly was a fat little man, fat to the point of being circular, who was clearly out of place among the traditional characters. Not wishing to discourage the creativity of the young Michelangelo, Sister bent over his desk, pointing to the stable's rotund visitor.

"Johnny," she asked, "who is this?"

The little boy looked up at her, apparently surprised by the sister's ignorance. "Why that's Round John Virgin, Sister," he advised her solemnly.

•

WILLIAM SAFIRE found equal difficulty with the pledge of allegiance in his youth, offering these variations, "I pledge a legion to the flag," "one naked individual" (a very contemporary addition, he observes), and he refers to Richard Stans as the most saluted man in America, as in "and to the republic for Richard Stans." "One nation in a dirigible" or "one nation and a vegetable" were other charming adaptions created by young minds through the years.

The recent addition to the pledge of allegiance of "under God" has created another problem. As written, "one nation under God," there is no comma between nation and under, nevertheless, many people pause here.

Carmel City Councilwoman Eleanor Laiolo finds herself frequently approaching this line with trepidation, as do many others, knowing that if she says it correctly, her "under" will sound trumpet-like in isolation, leaving her struggling afterward to regain the appropriate cadence and suffering the stares of the misinformed. Better, perhaps, to join the errant masses.

To youngsters, "through the night with a light from a bulb" makes more sense in the National Anthem than the actual line. Even as adults, things with which we are unfamiliar cause us the same trouble and so, the sports announcer Vin Scully often receives mail addressed to Vince Cully. Similar misspelled letters are received by Brian Gumbo or Grumble. This is referred to as the Guylum Bardo syndrome, sometimes resulting in references such as the Pullet Surprise (which is a malaprop).

A popular hymn was sung in the early years as "come all creation's Henry Joyce," which to everyone's surprise turned out to be "come all ye nations and rejoice." No one knew, nor cared, who Henry Joyce was, but we all beckoned him at the top of our lungs.

Even great literature does not escape the innocence of youth. Ernest Notar of San Francisco (not from the Notar Republic), recalls the curse of the witches in MacBeth as "Double, double, toilet trouble."

Some changes are intentional for the sake of humor. The British award a series of honors known as the CMG, KCMG and GCMG. These translate respectively (and I suppose respectfully) as the Cross of St. Michael and St. George, Knight's Cross of St. Michael and St. George and the Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George. Among the "inner circle," however, and particularly among those passed over for the honors, they are known as Call Me God, the King Calls Me God, and God Calls Me God.

Q. What is THE NEW WORLD EXHIBIT?
A. It's a salon in which are displayed many of the unique ideological products created by perhaps the greatest scientist and noblest man in history.

Q. Could you kindly describe this display?
A. It commemorates the achievements of many of the great heroes of the past who made it possible for him to develop his monumental and universally significant theory.

Q. Why is this theory so important?
A. He has discovered how to create a stabilized and durable Civilization that can stand for all time, and without which, the human species doesn't have a future.

Q. Is the success of THE NEW WORLD EXHIBIT critical also?
A. It's in the vanguard of those companies embodying the revolutionary principles disclosed in his grand Theory of Primary Property, and can provide some of the essential leadership for rebuilding the world on a rational and moral basis while we still have the time to do so.

Q. Why else would someone want to visit your salon?
A. To get acquainted with much of your lost intellectual ancestry, to pay gratitude to many of your greatest benefactors, to derive ideological and inspirational value from many of the proprietary items displayed therein, to participate (if only indirectly) in the creation of a magnificent and peaceful New World, and so that you and your family might enjoy yourselves!

Q. What do you offer for sale?
A. A handsomely framed letter authored by yours truly, and which has historical significance of its own. It was written so as to boost public morale while giving people good solid reasons to be optimistic about the future, and could prove to be a very interesting collector's item as the years go by.

Q. How much does it cost?
A. Two hundred and fifty dollars.

Q. Isn't that a lot of money?
A. With your "civilization" collapsing and time running out, how much is it worth to have hope?

Financing Your Future

Q. Do I really need to get involved in financial planning?

A. If your want to reach specific financial objectives—buying a house, or funding a child's education, or ensuring a comfortable retirement—you can benfit from financial planning.

Maybe you're like many middle-income families that don't need a formal financial plan. They just need capable advice on how to achieve simple financial goals. Or maybe you're more like other families that do require a more comprehensive plan to attain their financial objectives.

Whatever your financial status, a competent professional can help you make sense of the tangle of tax regulations, market trends and investment opportunities. After you select a financial planner, get your relationship off to the right start.

First, discuss what kind of financial services you need, If you need a comprehensive plan, discuss your short- and long-term goals. Second, learn what services your planner can provide and what other financial services you require. Some professionals work together with lawyers and accountants to provide a full range of services. Third, have any financial recommendations detailed in writing for your review. Before committing to an action plan, understand all the risks and costs.

AIDS and Older Adults

IT MIGHT seem strange to write about AIDS in a column such as this, but did you know that in Monterey County from 1980 through 1988 there were 14 people over age 50 diagnosed with AIDS which represented 14 percent of the AIDS population? In 1989 through Nov. 30 there were five people over the age of 50 with AIDS that represented 16 percent of the AIDS population!

Nationally the statistics show that 10 percent of all AIDS cases have involved people over the age of 50. The unfortunate part of this disease is that many more older people are believed to be infected, although not experiencing the symptoms.

The National Institute on Aging just recently published a paper on this subject. For many people the word AIDS connotes sharing drug needles and syringes with an infected person or exchanging body fluids, such as semen and blood of an infected person. In most cases, for the older adult, it is more likely to occur because of blood transfusions. This sector of the population receives the highest rate of blood transfusions and thus the higher risk of contaminated blood.

Despite popular beliefs, AIDS is not spread by mosquito bites, using public telephones or restrooms, being coughed upon by an infected person, or touching someone who is infected.

In order to understand more about AIDS it is helpful to describe how it infects a person. The AIDS virus (better known as the Human Immunedeficiency Virus [HIV[) travels in the blood stream and affects the immune system. Thus, persons who become ill with other diseases — such as cancer — cannot fight back and death occurs. The terrible thing about AIDS is that symptoms may not show up for nearly 10 years.

What complicates the diagnosis for older people is that the early symptoms of AIDS as fatigue, loss of appetite and swollen glands are similar to other diseases that are common to the adult person.

Prevention of AIDS is a personal responsibility both in lifestyle of the individual as well as taking precautions if a blood transfusion may be required. Some people are using their own blood which has been taken prior to an operation. Others are using blood of some other person whom they know and trust.

FREE BROCHURE KIT SHOWS HOW TO LOSE WEIGHT

If you always do what you have always done, you will always get what you have always gotten.

That's what the American Heart Association says about your efforts to manage your weight. If you are overweight, the secret to losing pounds and keeping them off is to live differently than you are now. You must eat less and better, increase your physical activity and change your lifestyle and environment.

Then to keep the weight off, you must learn to handle the lapses, relapses and collapses.

That's not easy, but the Heart Association has some expert advice on weight control in a packet of two brochures called "Taking It Off."

And it's free.

To get your free copy of these brochures, send a self-addressed, 25-cent stamped, business size envelope marked, "Attention: Taking It Off," to the local American Heart Association office listed in the white pages of the telephone directory.

HOSPICE VICE PRESIDENT HONORED

Susan Freeland, vice president of Development and Communications for Hospice of the Central Coast and the Central Coast Visiting Nurse Association, has been conferred the designation of Certified Fund Raising Executive (CFRE) by the National Society of Fund Raising Executives.

In addition to passing an examination, candidates are evaluated on their contributions to the advancement of fund raising and philanthropic management.

Freeland was one of 131 candidates to receive certification this fall, bringing the total number of CFREs to 2,044 nationwide.

Seniors program needs participants

Carmel Police Department's "Seniors Helping Seniors" program has need for two types of seniors: those who would like to help and those who desire help.

According to Cathy Dampier, desk officer, there are seniors who are looking for some type of community involvement to donate their time and others who are lonely, "shut-ins," or are "at-risk" due to medical or physical reasons and desire contact with someone who cares about their welfare.

Under the program, senior volunteers call participants of the program by telephone from the Carmel Police Department. If for some reason the recipient doesn't answer the phone, the volunteer alerts the police dispatcher and a patrol unit is sent to check on the participant's welfare. To be effective, calls are made at about the same time every day, Dampier said, but the seniors aren't restricted to their homes.

Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer or a recipient of the "Seniors Helping Seniors" program is encouraged to call the Carmel Police Department at 624-6403.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

'You know best, Oh Lord'

From the Jan. 14, 1982
Carmel Pine Cone

Help us to renew our dedication to service above self for that is what this human pilgrimage is all about. Without service to others it doesn't make much sense — does it?

One of God's great soldiers, the Basque, St. Ignatius Loyola (Inigo Lopez de Loyola 1491-1556), wrote these words in the 16th century:

"Teach us le Bon Dieu to serve Thee
As Thou deservest best
To toil and not to stop to rest
To give and not to count the cost
To fight and never to say that all is lost
To labor and to seek not reward.
Is not doing Thy will enough reward, Oh Lord?"

Just 66 years ago come Friday next, A Rev. Levi J. Puver, D.D., a Protestant Divine of Puritanical persuasion, prayed over the Council of Glouchester, Mass. His words shocked the city but we doubt if they shocked them into action. "We pray for those who are too lazy to vote but not too lazy to grumble; for those who believe all laws should be enforced except the laws they do not like.

"Perhaps it is too much to ask that they be blessed and the only thing you can do is to let them go to hell where they belong, but you know best, Oh Lord."

Finally we close with these thoughts from the poet Phylis McGinley, my friend, entitled The Old Philanthropist:

His millions make museums bright
Harvard anticipates his will
While his young typist weeps at night
Over a druggist's bill.
Amen.

Is brotherhood out of style?

Your children are invited to learn what the Bible teaches about the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man in the Christian Science Sunday School.

Any young person up to the age of twenty is welcome to visit or enroll.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

There are 100 million people in the mation's work force and at least 20 percent face responsibilities for the care of elderly relatives, according to the National Council on Aging. The percentage is growing and major companies increasingly are offering "elder-care" benefits to employees. These range from advice on helpful local agencies and other resources to time off for elderly care. It's estimated that about one in five companies with 1,000 or more employees now provides some form of elder-care assistance.

People 65 to 69 on Socail Security who work to earn additional money will be allowed to keep more of it starting in 1990. At present those between 65 and 69 lose one dollar in benefits for every two dollars they earn above $8,880. That will change in 1990 to one dollar lost out of every three. Those 70 or over are not limited to what they may earn without losing benefits.

BalletMet brings diverse program to Sunset Theater

BALLETMET, directed by John McFall, will perform a variety of dances on Sunday, Jan. 14 in Sunset Theater, Carmel. Tickets are $10 and $12.50 for the 8 p.m. performance. For additional information or reservations, call 624-3996.

BALLETMET'S opening season program features a variety of dance, including the classic Pas de Quatre as well as a world premiere by choreographer James Kudelka. Performance is set for 8 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 14 in the Sunset Theater in Carmel.

Pas de Quatre, V. Gzovsky's Grand Pas Classique and a repeat performance of last year's hit, Troy Game, choreographed by Robert North, will mark the opening of BalletMet's fourth season under the artistic direction of John McFall.

"We're delighted to bring to our audience yet two new works in our quest to bring you the best repertoire available anywhere in the country," said McFall. "Pas de Quatre represents the enduring beauty of the classical suite of dances and James Kudelka's world premiere demonstrates our continuing commitment to enrich the art of dance here and around the globe. We'll be taking these two ballets with us on our New York, Canadian and California tours."

Kudelka, whose In paradisum premiered in Columbus in September of last year, has choreographed a new ballet for 10 dancers, set to the lush sounding work, Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis, written by Ralph Vaughan Williams for a double string orchestra. Kudelka is currently the resident choreographer of Les Grands Ballets Canadiens in Montreal, Canada.

The opening ballet, Pas de Quatre brought to the stage four of the greatest ballerinas of the romantic era. The ballet was performed by its original cast only four times, each time to a tumult of applause and showering of floral gifts. Based on contemporary accounts of the ballet and a lithograph by A.E. Chalon. Sir Anton Dolin reconstructed Pas de Quatre for American Ballet Theater in 1941 and again for a gala performance benefitting the Dance collection of the New York Public Library in 1972. Violetta Boft's staging for BalletMet is based on the Dolin reconstruction.

Gzovsky's Grand Pas Classique is a classical pas de deux set to the music of Frenchman Daniel Auber and is staged by BalletMet's own ballet mistress, Violetta Boft.

North's Troy Game, a dance for eight men, is a grueling physical exercise performed to the steady beat of a Brazilian percussion score by Robert Downes. It combines imagery, elements of body building and the martial arts as it takes a tongue-in-cheek look at male machismo.

Reserved seating at $12.50 and $10 is available at the director's office in Sunset Center. For more information call 624-3996.

American Chamber Players to concertize tomorrow

THE CHAMBER Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula presents the American Chamber Players in concert Friday, Jan. 12 at Sunset Theater, Carmel. The concert will begin at 8 p.m.

The artists for this performance will be Anthony Cecere, horn; Alexis Galperine, violin; Miles Hoffman, viola; Julia Lichten, cello; Ann Schein, piano, and guest artist Frank Carnovale, double bass. Founded in 1986 by violist Miles Hoffman, the American Chamber Players were drawn from the musicians who performed in the Library of Congress Summer Chamber Festivals in Washington, D.C., which Hoffman had initiated in 1982. Under the artistic direction of Hoffman, this core group of musicians performs a repertoir ranging from classical masterpieces to newly commissioned American works.

She has performed at the Marlboro Music Festival, and toured with Music from Marlboro. She is a member of the Lichten-Tao Duo which toured Europe in 1988 under the auspices of the U.S. Information Agency's Artistic Ambassador Program.

Ann Schein, piano, made her Carnegie Hall Debut in 1952, after studies with Artur Rubinstein and Dame Myra Hess. She has played recitals around the world, and has performed as soloist with the top orchestras in the U.S. and London. # MUSIC CORNER

By Nathalie Plotkin

Baritone in recital of rare musical quality

EVIDENTLY the word about the vocal and musical artistry of a singer of well deserved world-class fame has not yet penetrated to our little corner of the world. That's the only reason I can figure on for there being far fewer in the audience at Sunset Theater last Saturday night than baritone Thomas Allen deserved. To those subscribers who, for one reason or another, didn't come to the Carmel Music Society's first offering of the New Year — too bad. You missed a recital of rare and treasurable musical quality.

The program was well varied, generously proportioned and was a sampler of many facets of vocal writing, beginning with three songs of the Italian Baroque. Allen may have been testing the hall and his vocal delivery, for he began with a blast of rich sound and very emotional dynamic contrasts in a song by Bononcini, overpowering a small work with excessive vocal tone. That old chestnut "Caro Mio Bene" fared far better. Here, he was in complete control. The lovely floating gentle delivery was musically fulfilling. A Scarlatti song sparkled and from here on, Allen displayed the proper balance and control to suit his voice and the hall.

Songs by Purcell and Haydn were interpreted with great sensitivity, with the voice employed to create the varying moods of their texts in truly artistic fashion. Haydn's "She Never Told Her Love" was a lyrical creation of unusual beauty. Four Schubert Lieder made up the next group. These were somewhat less familiar choices and it was enlightening to hear them in such an intelligent and informed rendition. Charm, lightness and humor made the music vividly alive and enjoyable.

Four Brahms Lieder were more dramatic and far darker in mood. "Standchen" was a lovely dramatic entity. In "Die Kranze," Allen conveyed desolation as he put his voice and interpretive skill into the service of the music. His chest tones were very well handled. Fine-lined projection and control were also well evinced in "An die Nachtigall" and "Botschaft."

Six songs from "A Shropshire Lad" to poems of Housman set to music by George Butterworth, whose impressionistic compositional style captured the foreboding atmosphere of the texts, were very expressively delivered. The lyric character of the voice with its fine flexibility was carefully shaped to the rather bleak vocal lines and the troubled mood of the poetry.

As engrossing and satisfying as the Lieder were, when Allen got to a sampling of his opera roles, another and formidable dimension of his abilities was revealed. The "Serenade" from "Don Giovanni" by Mozart was suavely and warmly sung. An aria from "Eugene Onegin" by Tchaikowsky was given resonance and dramatic intensity. But the real audience pleaser was Papageno's "Der Vogelfanger" aria from the "Magic Flute' by Mozart. Allen brought his own bird whistle along, and this, added to his very real flair for comedy, made for a thoroughly delightful projection.

Four Northumbrian folk songs from the singer's home territory, completed the program and as was true all evening, were performed in completely musical and sympathetic fashion.

As encores, Benjamin Britten's version of the song "Foggy, Foggy Dew" which had a cowboy lilt and rhythm in the accompaniment, was sung with a wickedly funny inflection and the Brahms "Lullaby" brought the evening's endeavor to an end.

Pianist Dan Saunders, who is a formidable musician in his own right, was a magnificent collaborator with Mr. Allen. His accompaniments which were frequently composed as to be far more than just that, being meant to be an integral part of the texture of the music, were delivered with the greatest skill and devotion and the rapport between him and the singer was outstanding.

Varied offerings scheduled at Laguna Seca this year

THE SPORTS Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula (SCRAMP) has revealed three major motor sports attractions to be presented at Laguna Seca Raceway in 1990.

Honda and Yamaha Motorcycles will present the 3rd United States International Grand Prix for motorcycles here April 6-8, 1990.

The international competition, the only race of its kind in the United States each season, will again feature 500cc machines, the 250cc class and the extremely popular sidecars. Thus far in the off season, there have been many changes in teams, sponsors and riders. Four-time world champion Eddie Lawson has joined Team Kenny Roberts with Marlboro backing. Now teamed with last year's points runner-up Wayne Rainey, the 500cc competition should be intense.

Following the United States International Grand Prix will be the 17th Monterey Historic Automobile Races, Aug. 17-19, 1990.

Organizer Steven A. Earle of Santa Barbara said this week he has narrowed the choice of the 1990 featured marque down to two vehicles, and that he would make his final selection shortly.

Aston Martin was the honored marque here this past August and celebrated the 30th anniversary of its World Championship by building a replica of the LeMans 24 Hour race pit area in the Laguna Seca paddock, displaying all of the cars which participated in that championship season.

The grand finale scheduled for the 1990 season will be the 33rd Toyota Monterey Grand Prix, featuring the Champion Spark Plug 300, part of the CART PPG INdy Car World Series.

That event will be run Oct. 19-21, 1990 and for the second year in a row will be last race of the PPG Cup season. When the drivers arrived in Monterey last month, Emerson Fittipaldi had already clinched the PPG Cup Championship. But that only heated up the competition and Rick Mears, with nothing to lose and the runner-up point money to protect, not only grabbed the pole position at a record speed of more than 110 miles per hour, but came back Sunday afternoon to win the Champion Spark Plug 300.

Fans are reminded that for more information about the 1990 racing schedule they can call the Laguna Seca Office at 648-5111, weekdays between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

The net proceeds from the major motor sports events produced at Laguna Seca Raceway by SCRAMP go to charity. More than 50 charity and civic organizations from Monterey, San Benito and Santa Cruz counties benefit from the donations which are made at the end of each season.

This year's donations, scheduled to be made Dec. 1, are expected to push SCRAMP's 32-year total to more than $3.7 million dollars. SCRAMP's production of the motor sports events at Laguna Seca Raceway also has a positive economic effect throughout the community with an estimated $40 to $50 million being spent in many diverse industries.

Secrets revealed for shooting better 35mm photos

EASTMAN KODAK Company, in conjunction with Myrick Photographic, will host a three-hour photographic seminar in Monterey to help amateur photographers make the most of their 35mm cameras.

All interested picture-takers are invited. Contact Myrick Photographic to purchase tickets. The course will be held at the Monterey Conference Center, in the Ferrante Room at 1 Portola Plaza from 7 to 10 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 24.

Each Kodak Photographic Seminar is an educational program designed to build enthusiasm for photography by providing amateurs with increased technical ability as well as new approaches for capturing subjects on film.

"The program will expose amateur photographers to a wide variety of photographic techniques," said Steve Myrick. "These new ideas will enable them to use their cameras more creatively and take better pictures."

Attendees will receive virtually a full course in photography. Ten wide-ranging subject areas will be covered.

The seminar opens with a program which showcases the outstanding work of amateurs who used skill, imagination, and non-professional equipment to take exceptional pictures.

A fast-paced, multi-image slide show will acquaint viewers with the basics of camera operation, including controls, composition, and exposure. More advanced skills, such as depth of field and the proper use of natural and artificial lighting, will also be explored.

A discussion of filters, lenses and lens attachments to extend the capabilities of most 35 mm cameras will be presented, as will information on the best use of the many different types of film available today (including Kodak Ektar films).

Attendees will learn creative techniques for photographing a wide range of favorite subjects, including "Electronic Flash - creating light out of darkness"; "Action - capturing the world of motion" and "People - our most memorable subjects".

The Kodak Photographic Seminar will be conducted by Ed Austin, a renowned expert in the field of still photography and instruction.

"Each attendee will receive a book, How to Make Winning Pictures, a $5.95 value, as well as a variety of money-saving coupons," said Myrick. "But by far, the greatest reward they will receive from the experience is the ability to take better pictures, time after time."

Photographic Center pays tribute to modern Polish photographers

"A POLISH View" is the theme of the latest exhibit presented in the gallery of the Photographic Center of the Monterey Peninsula. Works by 10 Polish photographers have been gathered for the center by the Polish Arts and Cultural Foundation in San Francisco.

The images in the exhibit vary from gum bichromate to traditional black and white to computer graphics with subject matter covering the gamut from portraits to the landscape.

Jan Berdak has devoted years to investigating the possibility of combining photography with computer graphics. For Berdak, the computer is a tool with enormous creative opportunities. Berdak uses an Atari 800 XL computer and a 14-year-old Sony TV.

Liliana Bilinska has exhibited in more than 160 Polish and international exhibitions and has received awards for her images.

Also on view will be images by Liszek Dziedzic, Stanislaw Fitak, Tadeusz Kowalski, Wieslaw Zielinski, Zosia Nasierowska, Andrzej Brzezinski, Zdzislaw Rynkiewicz and Pawel Pierscinski.

The images can be viewed 1 to 5 p.m. daily in the Photographic Center Gallery, located in the Sunset Cultural Center, San Carlos Street at Ninth Avenue, Carmel. For additional information, call 625-5181.

TIREDNESS* IS among the images by Zdzislaw Rynkiewicz included in "A Polish View." The collection can be viewed through Feb. 18 at the Photographic Center of the Monterey Peninsula. The collection was gathered for the center by the Polish Arts and Cultural Foundation in San Francisco.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Ready for action

FRESH BEGINNINGS and surprise. There we have the core of a concert at Monterey Conference Center's Steinbeck Forum on Sunday night (1/14). Monterey Peninsula Jazz Orchestra (MPJO) ready for action.

That popular aggregation thus will start its new season. Also brand new — the vocal quartet put together and rehearsed over the past several weeks by band singer Bill Allison. MPJO administrator Eric Tonn was out of town at this writing, but Bill answered questions quite willingly.

His brainchild's called Monterey Vocal Jazz Ensemble — Allison, Peggy Nesbitt Brown, Lee Durley, Lori Hofer. All have strong experience. Peggy long has been a real favorite of your present commentator. Her warm sound swings so surely.

"Some nice material will be introduced," Bill said — "an original by (band member) Frank Myers, Manhattan Transfer transcriptions, other things we like. And Eric invited very fine guest artists to work out with the orchestra. Lots of surprises between seven and nine o'clock. We'll take some chances, have fun, open up the scene, bring other people into the flow."

Ticket costs: $12 at the door or $10 beforehand. Purchases in advance may be made at Do Re Mi Music's two locations (The Barnyard, Carmel Plaza) and Abinante Music of downtown Monterey.

On Monday evening (1/15), MPJO resumes weekly appearances at Mission Ranch Barn. Steve and Marilyn Nergord of Mission Ranch have signed a contract with the band for 47 more Monday nights. Still only $4 per at the door, Bill says. Food and bar service available.

Monday's when the nation celebrates King Day. Local playwright Etha Gray's narrated drama about the life of Martin Luther King Jr. was put over one week and now will be given a free public production at Seaside's Oldemeyer Center on Saturday evening (1/13). Gospel music's an important element for Keeper of the Supreme Decree. The well-known Marvin McKnight and his joyous McKnight Singers will handle that job.

The three-hour event starts at seven o'clock and includes a reception after the stage presentation. Sponsors: Seaside Community Services, Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Pan-Hellenic Council. Veteran peninsula actor Brad Vaughn will portray the late civil rights leader. Other leading roles: Etha herself as Coretta King, Charles Chambers (Supreme Being), Perna Green (first monologue). The large cast features good parts for youngsters. Though there's no door charge, love donations will be accepted most gratefully.

Ms. Gray became a Movement supporter after meeting and talking with "the divinely inspired" Dr. King. Play committee members Janie Claytor-Woodson, Lucille Standifer, Norman and Cora Gleason, Dee Lattimore Berry, Valerie Yates — these aided her efforts throughout.

The gospel connection leads to thoughts of the Rev. Cecil Franklin, Aretha's brother and personal manager. Also assistant pastor at New Bethel Baptist Church in Detroit, the man has died at home. Heart attack. Age 49.

Ever-tasteful vocalist Madeline Eastman works the Sheraton's Monterey Bay Club on Thursday night (1/11). Her usual backup trio's excellent — pianist Dick Hindman, Vince Lateano on drums, Seward McCain and his acoustic bass.

Other bookings there: Chris Cain band (1/12-13), Bob Phillips and Terry Miller (1/14), Don Pendergrass plus pals (1/15), Jack and Ed Show (1/16), high-level pianist Larry Dunlap and vocalist spouse Bobbe Norris (1/17). If you've never heard Bobbe in person, do yourself the favor.

•

REEL STUFF: Filmmaker Spike Lee's shooting a new one in Brooklyn and it celebrates jazz. The wire from those parts says he wanted the title A Love Supreme after that famed composition by John Coltrane, but widow Alice Coltrane objected. So right now he's using Variations On A Mo' Better Blues.

Actor Denzel Washington stars as Bleek Gilliam, brilliant trumpet man who fronts the group managed by Giant (Spike's character). Blazing young trumpeter Terence Blanchard serves as a major advisor, working with Denzel on how to handle the horn and then playing tunes on the actual soundtrack. Blanchard, Branford Marsalis, Bill Lee (Spike's composer father) — all wrote music for the production.

Jazz is Bleek's life, says Spike. The "upbeat" film examines how Gilliam "balances relationships between his two women and his sidemen. The musical scenes will have a true acoustic sound."

Saxist Donald Harrison coaches actor Wesley Snipes. Drummer Jeff Watts from the Wynton Marsalis unit has a significant role beside pianist Giancarlo Esposito and bassist Bill Nunn.

Set designer Wynn Thomas created a jazz club called Beneath The Underdog. You may remember that Charles Mingus gave his published autobiography that title.

"Performances will be believable," Spike Lee pledges.

Meanwhile, Clint Eastwood's strong legacy at Warner Brothers will continue in 1990. It was his influence that made possible the Round Midnight jazz flick as well as Bird and that moving documentary on Thelonius Monk. Now Warner announces a full-length filmic profile of Quincy Jones — released about midyear.

At the helm: Courtney Ross and Ellen Weissbrod. On-camera interviews already have been completed with Jones collaborators like Ella Fitzgerald and Frank Sinatra. The producer and composer's career will be tracked back through his days as arranger and trumpet player for the Count Basie and Lionel Hampton organizations.

It shan't be all peaches and cream. Quincy admits that he fell apart when his marriage with actress Peggy Lipton ended. From a recent interview: "I went all the way down. I was really in trouble. I meditated four or five hours a day. What I wanted more than anything else was to get a real serious spiritual connection going again — and that's what happened."

Finally, Bette Midler's All-Girl Productions has undertaken development of a bioflick about bandleader Ina Ray Hutton.

SIGHT BITES: On the bay's Santa Cruz side, Kuumbwa Center welcomes a jazz constellation — configuration of tough bright stars — Monday night (1/15). It's the quintet having superb drummer Louis Hayes as leader.

LAND HO — Dramatic photo of tenorman Harold Land was taken in Mission Ranch Barn by Pacific Grove's Will Wallace. Will has permanent show at Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz. Neon sign behind Harold came from Clint Eastwood film about Bird Parker.

His bandmates: Ronnie Matthews on piano, reedman Gary Bartz, Charles Tolliver plus driving trumpet, bassist Clint Houston. Just $12 per with an eight o'clock kick. Center Stage Ticketing.

Louis Hayes has kept professional company with other giants — Dexter Gordon, Horace Silver, Cannonball Adderley, McCoy Tyner (trio setting). Ronnie made albums with Lee Morgan and Jackie McLean.

A strong tribute came from alto saxist Harvey Wainapel, himself a noteworthy player. Just back from Europe, Harvey went into the recording studio with Frankfurt Radio Big Band. "Charles Tolliver was on the same session," Wainapel smiled. "He always has been one of my heroes."

Coming up at Kuumbwa (1/22) — righteous genius. I mean tenorman Joe Henderson.

• Celebrating its 15th anniversary, Tandy Beal Dance Company of Santa Cruz and international acclaim now announces play dates in Monterey. Evening concerts will be presented early next month (Friday and Saturday 2/2-3) at Santa Catalina School Performing Arts Center.

The program: Keyboards, Reeds, and Dances. This features onstage improvisation by jazz pianist Art Lande and reedman Paul McCandless from the band Oregon. I saw this stylish show at Cabrillo College last year; Miss Beal expresses inborn humor via sequences which may be called Chaplinesque.

Center Stage handles ducats priced at $12.50 general and $10 for students and seniors. An opening night reception (co-hosted by Grovement Theater Arts Center) carries a $10 donation.

• Letter from Los Gatos painter Bruni Sablan, who specializes in jazz portraits and has many friends hereabouts. Bruni says critic Leonard Feather bought her rendering of Bill Evans. "I feel good about that — not because of (Leonard's) fame but because he knew these (subjects) really well."

• Yoshi's jazz club in Oakland signals that Lee Brenkman has taken over as musical director. A "self-confessed eclectic," Lee was involved with booking and technical production at San Francisco's Great American Music Hall for 15 years.
